

Camille Carey

Camille Carey became Dean of the UNM Law School on July 1, 2022.

Professor Carey joined the UNM Law Faculty in 2009. She teaches Torts, Advanced Torts, and Civil Procedure. She has also taught Domestic Violence and Immigrants' Rights and in the Clinical Law Program.

Carey began her teaching career at Yale Law School, where she was a Robert M. Cover Teaching Fellow and Clinical Lecturer. At Yale, she established and taught the Domestic Violence Clinic, which focused on serving immigrant and low-income women. The Clinic represented clients in tort, family law, immigration, housing, public benefit, unfair trade practice, and other related claims. She also taught in Yale's Community Lawyering Clinic.

Prior to entering law teaching, Professor Carey was an Equal Justice Works Fellow, Mayer Brown Fellow, and Staff Attorney at the Legal Aid Society of New York in New York City. At Legal Aid, she developed a project representing immigrant victims of domestic violence in immigration, family law, public benefit, housing, and civil rights cases.

Professor Carey's research and teaching interests include tort law, domestic violence, feminist legal theory, immigration, experiential education, and clinical legal education. Carey is currently conducting a qualitative and quantitative study of the experiences of domestic violence tort plaintiffs to identify whether pursuing a domestic violence tort claim against an abuser provides therapeutic, financial, and deterrence benefits.

- B.A. 1995, Vassar College
- J.D. 2001, UCLA Law School
- Member of the New York and Connecticut Bars and the U.S. District Court, Southern and Eastern Districts of New York