This CLE uses the New Mexico Supreme Court's recent decision in Loya v. Gutierrez to address a number of topics: tribal government authority to arrest and adjudicate non-members, the history of cross-commission agreements in New Mexico, considerations in inter-government negotiations of cross-commission agreements and other inter-governmental agreements. Also, the session covers the history of the Loya case, the legal theories advanced by the parties and how the Supreme Court's decision may affect the willingness of counties and municipalities to enter into cross-commission agreements with their tribal neighbors and what the consequences may be for each governmental entity. Please plan to join us for a robust discussion on these rousing legal topics.
