2016 Annual Meeting—Bench & Bar Conference

Annual Meeting Golf Tournament

It was a picture-perfect day for the 2016 Annual Meeting Golf Tournament at the Club at Las Campanas on Thursday, Aug. 18.

Although everyone played for fun, Ed Zendel, Bob Becker, Larry DeYapp and Logan Davidson took home a prize as the winning team. Mike Wagner won closest to the pin and Mary Ann Burmester had the longest drive.

Bar Commissioner Wesley Pool hoped he would lay claim to the hole-in-one prize, a 2017 Audi Q5 provided by Mercedes-Benz of Albuquerque. Unfortunately, no one made the winning shot, but there's always next year!

Opening/Welcome Reception

Attendees, guests, speakers and exhibitors gathered in the Prefunction Foyer on Thursday Evening for the Opening/Welcome Reception. State Bar President J. Brent Moore joined UNM School of Law Deans Sergio Pareja and Alfred Mathewson for a short thank you to the New Mexico legal community.

Saturday CLE Programming

Plenary: If You Post, You May Pay…Ethically

Stuart I. Teicher, "The CLE Performer," kicked off Saturday morning with a lively presentation on ethical issues in social media. He began by informing attendees that social media gives lawyers new ways to get into trouble. Teicher provided examples of ways attorneys can develop their technology-related ethics reflex, like by going on the internet and reviewing your profiles and regularly "checking the chatter" in regard to public or client comments.

Plenary: The Rise of 3-D Technology: What Happened to IP?

3-D printers are used for a wide range of purposes, as small as a cell phone antenna and as large as the manufacturing of a car. Jeffrey H. Albright, Dr. Bradley Jared and Jennifer M. Hogans discussed the consequences that come with this incredible technology. Recently, TSA authorities at the Reno-Tahoe airport found a loaded 3-D plastic gun in luggage. The increased potential for espionage and breaches of cyber security, along with the exponential growth in patents are other current issues.

Plenary: The New Mexico Legal System: Perspectives from the Bench and Bar

Attendees present for the final plenary session of the 2016 Annual Meeting participated in an open discussion with panelists Judge Carl J. Butkus of the Second Judicial District Court, Judge Albert J. Mitchell Jr. of the 10th Judicial District Court, President-elect Scotty A. Holloman, Justice Edward L. Chávez and Bar Commissioner Ernestina R. Cruz. The group discussed the state of the judiciary, bench and bar relations, the valuable role legal professionals play within the New Mexico courts and the administration of justice and the current issues and the future of the legal profession.

J. Miles Hanisee, Judge

{1} Trevor Merhege (Defendant), appeals from his conviction for criminal trespass contrary to NMSA 1978, Section 30-14-1(B) (1995). The crime of criminal trespass is defined in pertinent part as "knowingly entering or remaining upon the unposted lands of another knowing that such consent to enter or remain is denied or withdrawn by the owner or occupant thereof." Section 30-14-1(B). Defendant asserts that there was insufficient evidence to establish he knew that he lacked consent to enter upon the land of another. Conversely, the State argues that there was sufficient evidence of Defendant's knowledge, specifically relying on the landowner's testimony that he had not given Defendant permission to enter upon his land. It further contends that the principles of finality and mootness preclude this Court from reviewing this appeal. We conclude that we have jurisdiction to hear this appeal. Further, we agree with Defendant that the landowner's testimony was insufficient to establish Defendant's knowledge and reverse his conviction.

BACKGROUND

{2} The relevant facts are not in dispute. On the night of September 3, 2011, Officer Adam Lem of the Portales Police Department was on routine patrol near the intersection of Main Street and East 9th Street. Officer Lem observed Defendant and his friend walking down East 9th Street at approximately 3:40 a.m. Officer Lem got out of his patrol car and yelled, "Hey[,] I want to talk to you." Defendant and his friend did not stop but instead fled on foot around the corner onto Main Street where they proceeded to hop a fence and cut across a private front yard belonging to Gary Watkins. Defendant's friend scaled two fences and jumped over to the neighboring property. Defendant attempted the same maneuver but his clothing became entangled in a chain link fence. Officer Lem caught Defendant when he was entangled in the chain link fence, arrested him, and charged him with resisting and evading an officer, a misdemeanor offense. The charge was later amended to criminal trespass.

{3} Defendant filed a motion to suppress in the magistrate court. The magistrate court granted Defendant's motion and dismissed the case. The State appealed to the district court and Defendant again filed a motion to suppress. After a hearing, the district court denied Defendant's motion and scheduled the matter for trial. Defendant argued that the matter should be remanded for trial in the magistrate court. The district court rejected this argument and proceeded with a trial.

{4} Officer Lem and Watkins testified on behalf of the State. Watkins testified that he had not given Defendant permission to be on his property on September 3, 2011, and had not, as a matter of "custom or . . . habit give[n] people permission to cut across his property at that hour" of the morning. Based upon the evidence presented, the jury found Defendant guilty of criminal trespass.

DISCUSSION

{5} Defendant contends the evidence was insufficient to support his conviction. Before we consider the merits of this argument, we first consider the State's argument that we lack jurisdiction to consider this appeal pursuant to principles of finality and mootness.

I. Finality/Mootness

{6} The State contends that we lack jurisdiction to consider this appeal because Defendant is appealing from an order of conditional discharge pursuant to NMSA 1978, Section 31-20-13(A) (1994). The State asserts that this is a non-final order and that this appeal is moot because Defendant has served his term of probation and been discharged. We disagree.

{7} In State v. Durant, 2000-NMCA-066, ¶ 1, 129 N.M. 345, 7 P.3d 495, we discussed whether a conditional discharge order should be considered final for purposes of appeal. We recognized that courts in other jurisdictions have held that conditional discharge orders are non-final when they are not accompanied by sentences and lack significant collateral consequences. Id. ¶ 9. We drew a distinction between one defendant's felony case, which could be considered in subsequent habitual offender proceedings, and another defendant's contempt case, which lacked any collateral consequences. Id. ¶¶ 9-10. We considered the merits of the first defendant's case and dismissed the second defendant's case. Id. ¶ 11.

{8} The crime of criminal trespass is a misdemeanor, not a felony, and thus cannot be considered as a prior felony conviction under our habitual offender statute. See § 30-14-1(E) (defining the crime of criminal trespass as a misdemeanor); NMSA 1978, § 31-18-17(D) (2003) (defining a prior felony conviction for purposes of habitual offender enhancement). Defendant nevertheless contends that he is subject to significant collateral consequences as a result of his conditional discharge. He states that he will be required to disclose the fact of his conviction on applications for employment, college, and other future pursuits. We agree that these are potentially significant consequences even though they are somewhat speculative. See United States ex rel. Grundset v. Franzen, 675 F.2d 870, 873 (7th Cir. 1982) (finding a controversy was not moot, reasoning that "[a]lthough the potential legal disabilities facing [the defendant] as a result of his misdemeanor conviction are somewhat more speculative than those facing a convicted felon, the possibility of a disability exists"). We note that a contrary result would effectively immunize the proceedings at trial from appellate review and conclude that we have jurisdiction to consider this appeal.

II. Sufficiency of the Evidence

{9} Turning to the merits, Defendant contends the evidence was insufficient to support his conviction.[1] In reviewing this claim, we examine the record to determine "whether substantial evidence of either a direct or circumstantial nature exists to support a verdict of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt with respect to every element essential to a conviction." State v. Sutphin, 1988-NMSC-031, ¶ 21, 107 N.M. 126, 753 P.2d 1314. We "view the evidence in the light most favorable to the state, resolving all conflicts therein and indulging all permissible inferences therefrom in favor of the verdict." Id.

{10} Defendant was convicted of criminal trespass contrary to Section 30-14-1(B), which defines the crime as "knowingly entering or remaining upon the unposted lands of another knowing that such consent to enter or remain is denied or withdrawn by the owner or occupant thereof." The jury was instructed that, in order to find Defendant guilty, the State had to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Defendant "entered property belonging to . . . Watkins without permission" and "knew or should have known that permission to enter had been denied[.]" Defendant contends that the State failed to present sufficient evidence that he knew that Watkins had denied him permission to enter his land.

{11} It is undisputed that Watkins did not give Defendant permission to enter his land. It is also undisputed that Watkins did not deny or withdraw consent to Defendant to enter his land. The determinative question is whether we can presume, as a legal matter, that the general public, including Defendant, had permission to enter upon Watkins' unposted land or whether such entry constitutes a violation of Section 30-14-1(B). In interpreting Section 30-14-1(B), "our main goal is to give effect to the Legislature's intent." State v. Almanzar, 2014-NMSC-001, ¶ 14, 316 P.3d 183 (alterations, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted).

> To discern the Legislature's intent, the Court looks first to the plain language of the statute, giving the words their ordinary meaning, unless the Legislature indicates a different one was intended. Where the language of a statute is clear and unambiguous, we must give effect to that language and refrain from further statutory interpretation.

Id. (alterations, internal quotation marks, and citations omitted).

{12} Where private land is posted with a "no trespassing" sign, a person must possess written permission from the owner or person in control of the land in order to enter upon it. Section 30-14-1(A). A person does not need written permission to enter upon the land of another in the absence of a "no trespassing" sign. Section 30-14-1(B). Instead, a person is allowed to enter upon such land unless he or she "know[s] that . . . consent to enter or remain is denied or withdrawn by the owner or occupant thereof." Id. The statute provides that "[n]otice of no consent to enter shall be deemed sufficient notice to the public and evidence to the courts, by the posting of the property at all vehicular access entry ways." Id.

{13} In State v. Duran, we recognized that "[p]osting of property is only one way to place an individual upon notice that he is not permitted upon another's property." 1998-NMCA-153, ¶ 34, 126 N.M. 60, 966 P.2d 768, abrogated on other grounds by State v. Laguna, 1999-NMCA-152, 128 N.M. 345, 992 P.2d 896. We recognized that, even absent any posting, there was "direct and circumstantial evidence" that the defendant in Duran knew that he was not authorized to enter upon the property in question. 1988-NMCA-153, ¶ 34. The landowner testified that she told the defendant to "stop bothering her" and phoned the police on a number of occasions concerning the defendant's entry on her property. Id. (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)

{14} Here, there was no such evidence. Unlike the landowner in Duran, Watkins did not place Defendant on notice that he was not permitted on his property. On the contrary, Watkins testified that he did not know Defendant prior to the night in question and had never communicated with him in any way. We conclude that Watkins did not deny or withdraw consent to enter his land to Defendant.

{15} The fact that the statute specifically refers to the posting of the property at all vehicular access entry ways as being sufficient evidence that the public does not have consent to enter suggests that the lack of such posting reveals that the public does have consent to enter. If Watkins had a subjective intent to limit access to his property, he had to reasonably communicate it to the public in general or to Defendant in particular, by posting or by some other means. Id. Absent such communication, we agree with Defendant that the State presented insufficient evidence that Defendant knew that he lacked consent to enter upon Watkins' land. As a result, we reverse his conviction for criminal trespass.

CONCLUSION

{16} For the foregoing reasons, we reverse Defendant's conviction and remand to the district court with instructions to vacate Defendant's conviction.

{17} IT IS SO ORDERED.

J. MILES HANISEE, Judge

WE CONCUR:

RODERICK T. KENNEDY, Chief Judge

CYNTHIA A. FRY, Judge

[1]Defendant also contends the district court erred in failing to remand this case to the magistrate court after reversing the magistrate court's grant of Defendant's motion to suppress. However, "the district court has concurrent original jurisdiction over misdemeanor cases, . . . and the defendant has no right to have the case heard in magistrate court[.]" State v. Heinsen, 2005-NMSC-035, ¶ 23, 138 N.M. 441, 121 P.3d 1040. We thus reject this argument.

Timothy L. Garcia, Judge

{1} Defendant appeals from his convictions for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and tampering with evidence. Defendant raises several challenges on appeal related to his criminal charges: the district court's refusal to instruct the jury on the lesser included offense of simple assault; the district court's decision to direct a verdict on the charged offense of assault with the intent to commit murder and then sua sponte instruct the jury on the new and different charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon after the close of evidence; and the district court's failure to properly instruct the jury concerning whether the weapon was a deadly weapon for the additional new charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. Next, Defendant argues that if this Court holds there was error in the district court's decision to sua sponte instruct the jury on aggravated assault with a deadly weapon as a lesser included offense of the previously charged offense, then the prohibition against double jeopardy prevents the State from retrying Defendant on that newly added charge. Defendant also asks for a retrial or resentencing on the tampering with evidence charge in the event that this Court holds there was error requiring a retrial on the aggravated assault with a deadly weapon charge, given that the convictions are inextricably linked. Lastly, Defendant argues that the district court erred by admitting bad act evidence introduced through a statement Defendant allegedly made about robbing the neighborhood.

{2} In its answer brief, the State concedes without analysis that the jury should have been instructed to find that Defendant's weapon was a deadly weapon and that, under the circumstances, it was fundamental error not to have done so. The State also concedes without analysis that Defendant's conviction for tampering with evidence should be remanded for a new trial. The State opposes Defendant's argument that double jeopardy bars retrial on the charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, noting that reversal is not sought for lack of evidence nor is it appropriate on a lack of evidence basis. Defendant did not address either of the State's concessions. Irrespective, we address all the issues presented for review in this appeal.

DISCUSSION

{3} Defendant and his neighbor (Victim) got into an argument, and Defendant started yelling obscenities about Victim and Victim's dogs. After threatening to shoot Victim and his dogs, Defendant went into his house and came back out with a knife. Defendant approached Victim who feared that he was going to be attacked. The police arrived and Defendant threw the knife away. The police later found the knife in Defendant's yard. We discuss additional facts as they become necessary in the context of our analysis.

ANALYSIS

{4} Our independent review of this case has identified compounding errors, beginning with the State's charging documents and its trial decisions, followed by the district court's sua sponte decision during trial that ended with improper instructions to the jury. Further, the State's concession of fundamental error in the jury instruction for aggravated assault inadequately addressed the resolution of these errors. See State v. Guerra, 2012-NMSC-027, ¶ 9, 284 P.3d 1076 (noting that the appellate courts are not bound by the state's concession).

{5} We begin our analysis by addressing the State's concession of fundamental error in the jury instruction for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. See State v. Caldwell, 2008-NMCA-049, ¶ 8, 143 N.M. 792, 182 P.3d 775 (observing that we conduct our own analysis of a conceded issue by the state). As we explain below, we accept the State's concession of fundamental error, then address the district court's improper decision to sua sponte instruct the jury on a different offense after the close of evidence because it is crucial to the State's ability to retry Defendant for the assault-based conduct that was at issue. We conclude that the compulsory rule of joinder bars further prosecution of Defendant for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. We further conclude that Defendant's conviction for tampering with evidence is relative to an indeterminate crime and should be amended accordingly, not retried, as the State conceded.

Fundamental Error in the Jury Instructions

{6} "The rule of fundamental error applies only if there has been a miscarriage of justice, if the question of guilt is so doubtful that it would shock the conscience to permit the conviction to stand, or if substantial justice has not been done." State v. Sutphin, 2007-NMSC-045, ¶ 16, 142 N.M. 191, 164 P.3d 72 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). "The general rule is that fundamental error occurs when the trial court fails to instruct the jury on an essential element." Id. Likening a missing element to "a partial directed verdict," our Supreme Court stated that such an action is impermissible on the basis that "it is the fundamental right of a criminal defendant to have the jury determine whether each element of the charged offense has been proved by the state beyond a reasonable doubt." State v. Nick R., 2009-NMSC-050, ¶ 37, 147 N.M. 182, 218 P.3d 868 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Fundamental error does not occur, however, where the jury was not instructed on an element that was not at issue in the case or where "there can be no dispute that the omitted element was established[.]" Sutphin, 2007-NMSC-045, ¶ 16.

{7} In the current case, the jury was instructed that it could find Defendant guilty of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon where the State proved the following elements beyond a reasonable doubt:

1. [D]efendant approached and threatened to stab [Victim];
2. [D]efendant's conduct caused [Victim] to believe [D]efendant was about to intrude on [Victim's] bodily integrity or personal safety by touching or applying force to [Victim] in a rude, insolent[,] or angry manner;
3. A reasonable person in the same circumstances as [Victim] would have had the same belief;
4. [D]efendant used a knife;
5. This happened in New Mexico on or about the 8th day of September, 2012.

The use notes for the Uniform Jury Instruction applicable to aggravated assault with a deadly weapon state that, unless the object used is specifically listed as a deadly weapon in NMSA 1978, Section 30-1-12(B) (1963), the jury should be instructed that the object used is a deadly weapon if it could cause death or great bodily harm when used as a weapon. UJI 14-305 NMRA, use note 5.

{8} The weapon at issue in this case is a three-and-one-half-inch kitchen knife. At trial, the Defendant characterized the weapon as "this little kitchen knife." The State does not dispute Defendant's description of the kitchen knife as small and concedes that it is not among the described knives specifically included within the definition of deadly weapons in Section 30-1-12(B): "daggers . . . switchblade knives, bowie knives, poniards, butcher knives, dirk knives . . . swordcanes, and any kind of sharp pointed canes[.]" We accept the State's concession that the knife at issue does not fall within the per se statutory definition for "deadly weapons," because it is not specifically designated as the type of knife considered to be a deadly weapon, see Nick R., 2009-NMSC-050, ¶ 16, and because the small kitchen knife is not contemplated "in the catchall phrases" referring to "inherently dangerous items that either are carried for use or are actually used to inflict injuries on [or kill] people." Id. ¶ 21.

{9} We also agree with the State that this failure to properly instruct the jury amounted to fundamental error. There was no evidence at trial about this particular kitchen knife that might suggest it was inherently threatening or deadly. In addition, there was no evidence about Defendant's skill with knives or his behavior that made his possession of it inherently dangerous or deadly. Thus, nothing in the record suggests that this is a situation where the missing element was undisputedly established. See Sutphin, 2007-NMSC-045, ¶ 16 (stating that fundamental error is not demonstrated where there is a missing element in the instructions where "there can be no dispute that the omitted element was established"). Finally, the jury instructions gave no suggestion that the jury was required to consider whether any deadly weapon was used or whether the knife was used as a deadly weapon. Cf. State v. Traeger, 2001-NMSC-022, ¶¶ 22-25, 130 N.M. 618, 29 P.3d 518 (holding that there was no fundamental error in the awkward, noncompliant phraseology of a "deadly weapon" instruction, where, (1) the jury was instructed to find that the baseball bat was used as a deadly weapon; (2) the Supreme Court was persuaded that the jury considered this essential element; and (3) the evidence clearly showed that the defendant used the baseball bat as a weapon to inflict great bodily harm in an effort to threaten the victim to undress and have forced sexual intercourse).

{10} We further observe that the character of the weapon was not an issue in this case because Defendant was neither charged nor tried by the State for a crime that specifically included a "deadly weapon" as an element. See NMSA 1978, § 30-3-3 (1977) ("Assault with intent to commit a violent felony consists of any person assaulting another with intent to kill or commit any murder, mayhem, criminal sexual penetration in the first, second[,] or third degree, robbery or burglary."); cf. Sutphin, 2007-NMSC-045, ¶ 16 (stating that fundamental error does not occur where the jury was not instructed on an element that is not at issue in the case). It was only after the close of evidence that the district court acted sua sponte to change the charge from assault with the intent to commit murder to aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. Thus, the State did not prosecute and Defendant did not defend against a charge that included a "deadly weapon" as an element of the crime. These facts, combined with the complete omission of the "deadly weapon" element from the instructions, constitute a miscarriage of justice that deprived Defendant of his "fundamental right . . . to have the jury determine whether each element of the charged offense has been proved by the state beyond a reasonable doubt." Nick R., 2009-NMSC-050, ¶ 37 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). For these reasons, we accept the State's concession of fundamental error and reverse Defendant's conviction for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Double Jeopardy

{11} Defendant argues that he should not be retried for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in the event that we determine that it is a lesser included offense of assault with the intent to commit murder, referring us to State v. Slade, 2014-NMCA-088, ¶¶ 38-41, 331 P.3d 930 (holding that a successive prosecution on an uncharged lesser included offense is barred by the Double Jeopardy Clause, where a conviction for the greater offense is reversed on appeal for insufficient evidence), cert. quashed, 2015-NMCERT-001, 350 P.3d 92. Defendant's alternative arguments emphasize that aggravated assault with a deadly weapon is not a lesser included offense of the originally charged offense and we agree. Because we agree that aggravated assault with a deadly weapon is not a lesser included offense of the originally charged offense, we are persuaded that Slade does not apply to this case.

{12} We are persuaded by Defendant's alternative theory of error, that (1) aggravated assault with a deadly weapon is a new and different offense and (2) the district court improperly amended the charges sua sponte after the close of evidence and then instructed the jury on this new offense. This new charge resulted in a violation of Defendant's constitutional right to proper notice of the charges against him. The district court's improper instruction on the uncharged offense did not operate to properly amend the original underlying charges. As such, the State may not successively prosecute Defendant on the uncharged aggravated assault offense, because the rule of compulsory joinder, Rule 5-203(A) NMRA, required the State to properly join the two offenses if it wanted to pursue both charges. See State v. Gonzales (Gonzales II), 2013-NMSC-016, ¶ 25, 301 P.3d 380. We explain in more detail below.

1. Instructing on a New Offense After the Close of Evidence

{13} After the close of evidence, the district court directed a verdict on the charged offense of assault with the intent to commit murder. However, the court determined sua sponte that the State could proceed against Defendant on the uncharged offense of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and approved the instruction to be submitted to the jury as a lesser included offense. We must determine the adequacy of Defendant's notice of the charges against him under these circumstances by applying the cognate approach. See State v. Hernandez, 1999-NMCA-105, ¶¶ 25-30, 127 N.M. 769, 987 P.2d 1156 (applying the cognate approach to the district court's conviction of the defendant for the uncharged offense of breaking and entering, where the district court sua sponte considered the charge to be a lesser included offense of aggravated burglary); see also State v. Meadors, 1995-NMSC-073, ¶¶ 12-13, 17, 22, 121 N.M. 38, 908 P.2d 731 (clarifying that New Mexico applies a cognate approach to determining whether a state-requested instruction on a lesser included offense of the charged offense is appropriately granted, such that the defendant was on sufficient notice of the need to defend against the argued lesser included offense). The cognate approach first incorporates a strict elements test that considers whether the statutory elements of the lesser crime are subsumed within the statutory elements of the charged crime. See id. ¶ 12. Then the cognate approach "focuses on the pleadings, the evidence adduced at trial, and the defendant's constitutional right to notice." Id. ¶ 22. In relevant part, the second part of the inquiry identifies a lesser included offense by determining if "the defendant cannot commit the greater offense in the manner described in the charging document without also committing the lesser offense." Id. ¶ 17; see also State v. Montoya, 2015-NMSC-010, ¶ 43, 345 P.3d 1056 ("When one offense is a lesser included offense of a crime named in a charging document, the defendant is put on notice that he [or she] must defend not only against the greater offense as charged but also against any lesser included offense." (alteration in original) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)). In addition, the district court is required to "conduct an independent analysis of the notice issue" to determine if for any reason presented by the case the defendant did not receive constitutionally adequate notice of the lesser offense. Meadors, 1995-NMSC-073, ¶ 18. By this measure, "the defendant should be fully aware of the possible offenses for which he or she may face prosecution and should have ample opportunity to prepare a defense." Id. ¶ 17.

{14} Under the strict elements test, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon is not subsumed within assault with the intent to commit murder because the latter does not require the use of a deadly weapon. See, e.g., State v. Patterson, 1977-NMCA-084, ¶ 7, 90 N.M. 735, 568 P.2d 261 ("Assault with intent to kill can be committed without use of a deadly weapon; thus, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon was not a lesser included offense[, under the strict elements test.]"); compare § 30-3-3 ("Assault with intent to commit a violent felony consists of any person assaulting another with intent to kill or commit any murder[.]"), with NMSA 1978, § 30-3-2(A) (1963) ("Aggravated assault consists of . . . unlawfully assaulting or striking at another with a deadly weapon[.]").

{15} Turning to the second part of the cognate approach, examining the charging document, this action was initiated in magistrate court by criminal complaint that originally charged Defendant with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. The criminal complaint was amended to replace that charge with assault with the intent to commit murder. The magistrate court held a preliminary hearing on the amended charge of assault with the intent to commit murder and tampering with evidence, and Defendant was bound over to district court on this amended charge by criminal information. The criminal information and amended criminal complaint alleged that for the purposes of assault with the intent to commit murder, Defendant "did unlawfully assault or strike at [Victim], with a knife, with the intent [to] kill [Victim] in the first or second degrees of [m]urder, contrary to Section 30-3-3, . . . a third degree felony." The jury instruction for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, as we discussed above, was required to have a finding that the knife used was a deadly weapon. Neither the statute for assault with the intent to commit murder nor the relevant charging document requires the use of a deadly weapon; and the relevant charging document did not describe the knife as a deadly weapon nor identify its significance as a deadly weapon in any way. As stated in our fundamental error analysis, the evidence was not directed at proving that the knife was a deadly weapon, consistent with the State's charging decision. Additionally, the State does not dispute that, during a pretrial hearing, defense counsel stated that aggravated assault with a deadly weapon was a more applicable charge but the State did not amend the charges. These facts suggest that Defendant was on notice that the State would not pursue the specific offense on which the district court sua sponte proceeded to instruct the jury. Under the circumstances, we hold that Defendant was not on notice or made fully aware of the possibility that he would need to defend against the "deadly weapon" element of the new offense, even if it were properly presented to the jury. See Hernandez, 1999-NMCA-105, ¶¶ 25-30 (reversing the defendant's conviction under the cognate approach on the ground that the defendant had no notice of the "breaking" element of breaking and entering when charged with aggravated burglary); see also Meadors, 1995-NMSC-073, ¶ 17 (requiring full awareness of the possible additional offense with ample opportunity to prepare a defense).

2. Compulsory Joinder Bars Subsequent Prosecution on Aggravated Assault With a Deadly Weapon

{16} We now address whether the State can retry Defendant for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon charge that was erroneously instructed at the first trial. The State did not address the potential joinder problem with the district court's sua sponte instruction to the jury on aggravated assault and simply presumes that it can proceed with a retrial for the aggravated assault charge. The State's concession and double jeopardy analysis treat this case as one where Defendant may be retried based on fundamental error occurring in the jury instruction for a charged offense. We are not persuaded.

{17} We have held that "Rule 5-204(A) [NMRA] allows a court to amend an information prior to sentencing but does not allow the court to amend if there is an additional or different offense charged."

State v. Roman, 1998-NMCA-132, ¶ 9, 125 N.M. 688, 964 P.2d 852. In Roman, we did not permit an amendment to the charging document where it was "used to impose an entirely new charge against a defendant after the close of testimony" because it prejudiced the defendant by denying him notice of, and the opportunity to defend, the charge. Id. ¶¶ 9, 14. The current case warrants the same result because, at trial, Defendant was not charged or tried by the State for the offense of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. The critical question is whether a subsequent prosecution of that different offense would be permitted.

{18} In Roman, where the amendment to the charge was prohibited, this Court articulated no opinion on the state's ability to pursue the uncharged offense and simply reversed the conviction on that uncharged offense and remanded to the trial court for resentencing and entry of an amended judgment consistent with the Court's opinion. See id. ¶ 16. Recently, however, our New Mexico Supreme Court has directly addressed successive prosecutions of different charges for the same conduct under Rule 5-203(A), the rule regarding compulsory joinder. See Gonzales II, 2013-NMSC-016, ¶¶ 25-33. Thus, we now examine the State's ability to proceed under the rule of compulsory joinder and its application to the double jeopardy issue in this case.

{19} In Gonzales II, the Supreme Court raised the issue of joinder sua sponte, as we do here, on the basis that the defendant's double jeopardy concerns, like the ones Defendant raises here, "necessarily implicated" the Court's joinder rule. Id. ¶ 26. We also note that raising this issue sua sponte causes even less "unfair surprise" to the State in this case than it did in Gonzales II. Id. ¶¶ 27-28 (precluding a claim of unfair surprise by the state based on a case from six years earlier applying the rule of joinder in a different context based on the existing joinder rule and based on the Court's history of "distaste for piecemeal prosecutions" (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)). Here, we have the benefit of Gonzales II, a recent case that conveys a clear warning that our compulsory joinder rule will be enforced, even sua sponte, to bar sequential prosecutions of charges not joined in the original trial that stem from the same conduct, where the prosecution pursued an all-or-nothing trial strategy. See id. ¶¶ 26-33. In its answer brief, the State had an opportunity to address the application of Gonzales II to the facts of this case. Instead, the State simply chose to concede the fundamental error in the jury instructions and summarily assert that double jeopardy would not bar retrial, because reversal was not based on insufficient evidence. We note that the State's double jeopardy analysis relied specifically on statements made by this Court in State v. Gonzales (Gonzales I), 2011-NMCA-081, 150 P.3d 494, 263 P.3d 271, aff'd 2013-NMSC-016, rather than the alternative joinder grounds that our Supreme Court relied upon in Gonzales II. Because "[j]oinder is designed to protect a defendant's double[]jeopardy interests" in this context, there is ample existing authority for us to address this issue sua sponte without the need for further briefing. See Gonzales II, 2013-NMSC-016, ¶ 26 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

{20} In Gonzales I, the defendant was charged with, and convicted of, negligent child abuse, which this Court reversed for insufficient evidence on appeal. Gonzales I, 2011-NMCA-081, ¶¶ 31-32. The defendant argued on appeal that double jeopardy would preclude a new charge of vehicular homicide, and this Court agreed because under the cognate approach it was a lesser included offense and, given that the state chose an all-or-nothing strategy, it must suffer the consequence of being unable to bring that lesser offense in a subsequent trial. Id. ¶¶ 33, 35-36, 38. The Supreme Court granted certiorari on the issue of subsequent prosecution and found it unnecessary to determine whether vehicular homicide was a lesser included offense of negligent child abuse for purposes of double jeopardy. See Gonzales II, 2013-NMSC-016, ¶¶ 12, 24. Rather, it concluded that the state could not pursue a subsequent charge of vehicular homicide based on the principle of joinder. See id. ¶ 24.

{21} The compulsory joinder rule states:

> Two or more offenses shall be joined in one complaint, indictment or information with each offense stated in a separate count, if the offenses, whether felonies or misdemeanors or both:
> (1) are of the same or similar character, even if not part of a single scheme or plan; or
> (2) are based on the same conduct or on a series of acts either connected together or constituting parts of a single scheme or plan.

Rule 5-203(A). Our Supreme Court construed this rule to mean that the criteria for the mandatory joinder of offenses are satisfied where under the facts of the case there are "two crimes based on the same conduct." See Gonzales II, 2013-NMSC-016, ¶ 25 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). In that situation, "[t]he [s]tate had no choice but to join these two offenses in one complaint, indictment or information, if it wanted to pursue them both." Id. (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Our Supreme Court explained that the purpose of the compulsory joinder rule, > viewed as a whole, is twofold: (1) to protect a defendant from the governmental harassment of being subjected to successive trials for offenses stemming from the same criminal episode; and (2) to ensure finality without unduly burdening the judicial process by repetitious litigation.

Id. ¶ 26 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). The Supreme Court also focused on tempering the "coercive effect" of "all-or-nothing prosecution strategies," by acknowledging that, while such a trial tactic is within the state's discretion, if such a tactic had no consequences, then "the [s]tate would have all of the benefits and none of the risks . . . , while the accused would have all the risks and none of the protections." Id. ¶ 33 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). Our Supreme Court concluded that to achieve all the goals of compulsory joinder, the remedy is to bar subsequent prosecution of an offense the state failed to join in the initial trial. See id. ¶ 31.

{22} In an effort to limit unfairness to the state in the application of the joinder rule, it appears our Supreme Court would be inclined to excuse the state's failure to bring all joinable offenses in one charging document where (1) a charge was unknown to the state when the defendant was indicted, and (2) the state requests an instruction on a lesser included offense that satisfies the Meadors cognate approach. *See Gonzales II,*2013-NMSC-016, ¶ 32 (noting that the state had at least three opportunities to join the offenses, it did not ask for a vehicular homicide instruction under Meadors, and the state was fully aware the vehicular homicide charge was available and decided on this particular, risky trial strategy).

{23} We do not discern any material factual distinction in the current case that would shield it from the consequences imposed by Gonzales II. Here, the charged offense failed for insufficient evidence when the district court directed a verdict on assault with the intent to commit murder after the close of evidence. The charging document was not amended to add aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, consistent with Rule 5-204(A), as stated above. The State was fully aware of the factual basis to pursue an aggravated assault with a deadly weapon charge and amended the original charging document to exclude such a prosecution. The State remained consistent with its all-or-nothing prosecution strategy throughout the proceedings and at trial, despite clear opportunities to amend the charges. Although the jury was ultimately instructed on the uncharged offense because of the sua sponte actions of the district court, the instructed offense did not satisfy the Meadors cognate approach. Thus, the new charge should never have been added by the district court and should never have gone to the jury.

{24} For these reasons, we hold that the State may not retry Defendant on the charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. Such a charge arises from the same conduct it unsuccessfully prosecuted during the first trial and is barred under the rule of compulsory joinder. Next, we must decide the consequences upon Defendant's remaining conviction of tampering with evidence and whether to accept the State's further concession that retrial is warranted.

Tampering With Evidence Is Not Subject to Retrial

{25} The offense of tampering with evidence is linked to the crime to which the tampering is related, in its degree of crime and punishment.

> Whoever commits tampering with evidence shall be punished as follows:
> (1) if the highest crime for which tampering with evidence is committed is a capital or first[-]degree felony or a second[-]degree felony, the person committing tampering with evidence is guilty of a third[-]degree felony;
> (2) if the highest crime for which tampering with evidence is committed is a third[-]degree felony or a fourth[-]degree felony, the person committing tampering with evidence is guilty of a fourth[-]degree felony;
> (3) if the highest crime for which tampering with evidence is committed is a misdemeanor or a petty misdemeanor, the person committing tampering with evidence is guilty of a petty misdemeanor; and
> (4) if the highest crime for which tampering with evidence is committed is indeterminate, the person committing tampering with evidence is guilty of a fourth[-] degree felony.

NMSA 1978, § 30-22-5(B) (2003). On the other hand, tampering with evidence can be a stand-alone crime that is not tied to a separate crime. See State v. Jackson, 2010-NMSC-032, ¶¶ 1, 21, 27-28, 148 N.M. 452, 237 P.3d 754. Where there is no separate, identified crime, the tampering offense is linked to an indeterminate crime under Section 30-22-5(B)(4), and is punished as a fourth-degree felony. See Jackson, 2010-NMSC-032, ¶¶ 21, 27-28. In the current case, the record indicates that Defendant was convicted of fourth-degree felony tampering with evidence under Subsection (B)(2), relating the tampering offense to a crime that is either a third or fourth-degree felony.

{26} Defendant asserts without elaboration that, insofar as the degree of his tampering with evidence conviction is tied to his conviction for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, he should be retried for tampering or permitted to challenge the degree of his conviction. In support of his assertion, Defendant cites to only Subsection (B)(3) of the tampering statute, stating that tampering may be a petty misdemeanor. The State concedes without elaboration that Defendant may be retried for tampering with evidence along with the charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. We are not persuaded that a retrial on tampering is warranted on any theories raised by the parties on appeal.

{27} Reading between the lines of Defendant's sparse argument, we understand him to argue that (1) because his tampering conviction was tied to his erroneous conviction for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, and (2) because his requested instruction on simple assault was wrongfully denied, he should be given the opportunity on retrial to establish that the highest crime with which he tampered was a misdemeanor assault, making his tampering conviction a misdemeanor under Subsection (B)(3). We are not persuaded by Defendant's premise that his tampering conviction was tied to the crime of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

{28} Recent decisions from this Court indicate that the degree and identification of the underlying crime to which the tampering offense relates, if any, are elements of tampering that should be decided by a jury. See State v. Sanchez, 2015-NMCA-077, ¶¶ 20-25, 355 P.3d 51 (reviewing the failure to instruct the jury on the crime to which tampering related for fundamental error), cert. denied, 2015-NMCERT-006, __ P.3d __ (No. 35,283 June 11, 2015); State v. Herrera, 2014-NMCA-007, ¶¶ 4-18, 315 P.3d 343 (same); State v. Alvarado, 2012-NMCA-089, ¶ 14, __ P.3d __(deciding for the first time that the Sixth Amendment requires the jury to find facts related to a specific crime that would increase a defendant's sentence for tampering). As such, the underlying crime to which tampering relates, if any, should be identified in the tampering instruction and found by the jury. See. Sanchez, 2015-NMCA-077, ¶¶ 20-25.

{29} In the current case, the jury instruction for tampering with evidence did not tie tampering to any identified crime. The instruction asked only whether Defendant hid or placed a knife with the intent to prevent his own apprehension, prosecution or conviction. Defendant did not object to this instruction in the district court, nor does he challenge it on appeal. This unchallenged instruction serves as the governing law of the case. See State v. Danek, 1994-NMSC-071, ¶ 13, 118 N.M. 8, 878 P.2d 326 (observing that unchallenged jury instructions become law of the case against the party who has not objected); Couch v. Astec Indus., Inc., 2002-NMCA-084, ¶ 40, 132 N.M. 631, 53 P.3d 398 ("Jury instructions not objected to become the law of the case.").

{30} In Alvarado, we held that where "[t]he jury was not asked to indicate the crime, if any, to which the tampering related[,] . . . the court is limited to sentencing a defendant under the 'indeterminate crime' provision [of the statute]." 2012-NMCA-089, ¶ 14. In that case, the defendant was acquitted of the crime to which the tampering conviction was related, and the jury was not instructed to find whether the tampering conviction related to any particular crime. Id. ¶¶ 1, 4, 10. Under these facts, we held that the district court properly sentenced the defendant for tampering with evidence of an indeterminate crime under Section 30-22-5(B)(4). Alvarado, 2012-NMCA-089, ¶¶ 14, 16.

{31} Similarly, in the current case, the offense to which Defendant's tampering was related failed for insufficient evidence, and on appeal we reverse its replacement by another offense and bar retrial on that new replacement offense. Thus, the underlying offense for which Defendant might have tampered is effectively rendered to be an unidentified, indeterminate crime. Furthermore, because the jury instructions did not require the jury to find that Defendant tampered with any particular crime or degree of crime, tampering was instructed as a stand-alone crime. See id. ¶ 14; cf. Jackson, 2010-NMSC-032, ¶ 28 (stating where an underlying crime is not identifiable, tampering is punished under the "indeterminate crime" provision in Subsection (B)(4), as a "catch-all"). Based on our opinion in Alvarado, Defendant would be properly sentenced for tampering with an indeterminate crime under Section 30-22-5(B)(4), punishable as a fourth-degree felony. See Alvarado, 2013-NMSC-089, ¶ 14.

{32} For purposes of determining whether retrial is appropriate, we hold that, because the jury instruction did not tie Defendant's tampering conviction to his conviction for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, retrial is not warranted on that basis. Similarly, retrial is not appropriate on the ground that Defendant was wrongfully denied an instruction on misdemeanor assault because tampering with evidence was instructed without challenge as a stand-alone crime. Consistent with Alvarado, we hold that the district court wrongfully convicted Defendant of having tampered with evidence of a third- or fourth-degree felony in the absence of such a finding by the jury. Rather than order retrial, we order the district court to amend the judgment and sentence to reflect that Defendant was convicted for tampering with evidence of an indeterminate crime under Section 30-22-5(B)(4). Because both the indeterminate provision and the provision under which Defendant was convicted make tampering a fourth-degree felony, resentencing on this conviction is not required.

{33} Defendant's brief in chief raises one remaining argument that may affect his right to retrial on the tampering conviction. Defendant contends that it was reversible error for the district court to admit Victim's testimony that Defendant stated that he robbed the neighborhood in the course of the overall incident at issue. Defendant characterizes the statement as unfairly prejudicial bad act evidence improperly admitted under Rules 11-403 NMRA and 11-404 NMRA. The district court admitted the evidence as relevant to, and probative of, Victim's fear of Defendant, which was an element of the incorrectly charged offense of assault. See NMSA 1978, § 30-3-1(B) (1963) (stating that assault consists of "any unlawful act, threat[,] or menacing conduct which causes another person to reasonably believe that he is in danger of receiving an immediate battery"). We agree with the district court that Defendant's statement is part of Defendant's menacing conduct at issue, but the relevance of Victim's fear relates solely to an improperly charged—assault-based—offense.

{34} Assuming that the admission of Defendant's statement was error, Defendant must also establish that there was a reasonable probability that its admission affected the jury's tampering verdict. See State v. Astorga, 2015-NMSC-007, ¶ 43, 343 P.3d 1245 ("Absent a constitutional violation, we look to whether there is a reasonable probability that the error affected the verdict. Defendant bears the initial burden of demonstrating that he was prejudiced by the error." (citation omitted)). To judge the probable effect of evidentiary error, we examine the context of the error to determine the role it played, including the source of the evidence, the emphasis placed on it, and other non-objectionable evidence. See State v. Leyba, 2012-NMSC-037, ¶ 24, 289 P.3d 1215.

{35} In the current case, the testimony about Defendant's statement that he robbed the neighborhood was elicited from Victim, not law enforcement, and was offered in the context of other blustering comments from Defendant. Defendant makes no showing that the State placed emphasis on this comment. There is no indication that the State attempted to relate this comment to the conduct that supported Defendant's conviction for tampering, and we see no probable relationship between the comment and the tampering charge that ultimately resulted in a conviction. The State presented uncontradicted testimony that Defendant had a knife during a confrontation with Victim and tossed it into a yard when he saw that police had arrived at the scene. The police officer recovered a knife in the location where Victim said Defendant had thrown it. This evidence was all that was required for the jury to convict Defendant of tampering. The blustering and menacing behavior suggested by Defendant's comment seems to even contradict the concealing behavior that underlies his tampering conviction. Under the circumstances presented at trial, we fail to see how Defendant's comment could make the evidence of tampering more probable in a manner sufficient to establish reversible error.

{36} Finally, because Defendant makes no independent allegation of error directed solely at the tampering with evidence charge, we see no reason to accept the State's concession that Defendant should be retried on the tampering charge. The tampering with evidence conviction is affirmed.

CONCLUSION

{37} This case amply demonstrates the importance of circumspection in making charging decisions throughout the proceedings. The State chose an unsuccessful, all-or-nothing, trial strategy that resulted in a directed verdict on the original charge of assault with intent to commit murder. The district court compounded this strategic all-or-nothing prosecution error by sua sponte instructing the jury on a new uncharged offense—aggravated assault with a deadly weapon—after the close of the evidence. As a result, Defendant was deprived of proper notice of the new charge against him. This triggered a violation of the compulsory joinder requirement in Rule 5-203(A). Further error was made when the jury was improperly instructed on the aggravated assault charge.

{38} We reverse Defendant's conviction for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and hold that the State may not retry Defendant on the aggravated assault with a deadly weapon charge that arose from the same assault-based conduct it unsuccessfully prosecuted in this case. Finally, we are not persuaded that retrial on the tampering charge is warranted and affirm Defendant's conviction for tampering with evidence. However, we remand this matter to the district court to correct the judgment and sentence consistent with our decision herein and to properly reflect that Defendant was convicted of tampering with an indeterminate crime that carries the same fourth-degree felony penalty as previously imposed by the district court.

{39} IT IS SO ORDERED.

{1} We address in this appeal whether the provision of the Implied Consent Act that entitles a person arrested for driving under the influence to a reasonable opportunity to arrange for an independent chemical test requires the arresting officer to transport the person to obtain the test. We hold that it does not and reverse the district court's order suppressing the results of the breath tests taken by the arresting officer.

BACKGROUND

{2} The facts are not disputed. On December 22, 2012, State Police Officer Toby Lafave observed Defendant Johnny Maxwell driving without a seatbelt and without adequate tail light illumination. After stopping Defendant, Officer Lafave observed signs of intoxication that led him to conduct field sobriety tests. Observing further clues of impairment, he arrested Defendant on suspicion of driving while under the influence of liquor (DWI). Officer Lafave read Defendant the advisory under the Implied Consent Act, NMSA 1978, Section 66-8-109(B) (1993), and administered a breath alcohol test. The two samples registered .10 grams of alcohol in two hundred ten liters of breath.

{3} Officer Lafave took Defendant to the Socorro County Detention Center and while there, Defendant asked for an independent test. Officer Lafave provided Defendant with a telephone and a telephone directory. Defendant called the Socorro General Hospital and spoke with a nurse in the emergency room. He told her that he needed a blood draw for DWI testing and was told to "come on up and they would administer the test." Defendant asked Officer Lafave to transport him to the hospital, and Officer Lafave declined, saying that the test had to be performed at the detention center.

{4} Shortly thereafter, Defendant was released on bail, and his mother drove him to the hospital. Defendant arrived at the hospital approximately fifteen to twenty minutes after his telephone conversation with the nurse. At the hospital, Defendant spoke with the nurse and an emergency room doctor. The doctor told him that he would not perform the test without an order because "the situation was not life threatening."

{5} Defendant was charged in magistrate court with DWI (third offense) in violation of NMSA 1978, Section 66-8-102(C)(1) (2010). He entered a conditional plea to DWI (second offense), based on a plea and disposition agreement, reserving his right to appeal a motion to suppress. On appeal, the district court suppressed the breathalyzer test samples taken by Officer Lafave, finding that Officer Lafave's refusal to transport Defendant to the hospital to conduct the independent test was unreasonable, in violation of Defendant's rights under Section 66-8-109(B) and (E) to have an additional test performed and a reasonable opportunity to arrange for the test. The district court further found that Defendant was prejudiced by the State's statutory violation. The State appealed the district court's order. See NMSA 1978, § 39-3-3(B)(2) (1972) (permitting the state to appeal an order suppressing evidence under specified conditions).

THE RIGHTS PROVIDED BY THE IMPLIED CONSENT ACT

{6} Under the Implied Consent Act, "[a]ny person who operates a motor vehicle" in the state who is arrested for DWI is "deemed to have given consent" to approved breath and/or blood tests to determine the drug or alcohol content of his or her blood, as determined by a law enforcement officer. NMSA 1978, § 66-8-107(A) (1993). The test is administered at the direction of a law enforcement officer who has reasonable grounds to believe that the person has been driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs. Section 66-8-107(B). Section 66-8-109(B) provides:

> The person tested shall be advised by the law enforcement officer of the person's right to be given an opportunity to arrange for a physician, licensed professional or practical nurse or laboratory technician or technologist who is employed by a hospital or physician of his own choosing to perform a chemical test in addition to any test performed at the direction of a law enforcement officer.

The cost of the test performed when a person has exercised the right to have an independent test described in Section 66-8-109(B) is paid by the law enforcement agency employing the law enforcement officer directing the administration of the chemical test. Section 66-8-109(D).

{7} The issue before us is whether the right of the Implied Consent Act to an independent test includes the obligation of a law enforcement officer to transport the person tested to another location for the test to be performed. As a matter of interpretation of the Implied Consent Act, we address the issue under de novo review. See State v. Chakerian, 2015-NMCA-052, ¶ 10, 348 P.3d 1027 (applying de novo review to interpret the Implied Consent Act when the historical facts were not disputed), cert. granted, 2015-NMCERT-005, ___P.3d___ (No. 35, 121, May 11, 2015).

APPLICATION OF THE IMPLIED CONSENT ACT

{8} When engaging in statutory interpretation, we endeavor to discern the intent of the Legislature in adopting a statute. State v. Smith, 2004-NMSC-032, ¶ 8, 136 N.M. 372, 98 P.3d 1022. Our best indication of such intent is the language of the statute itself. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp. v. Anaya, 1985-NMSC-066, ¶ 15, 103 N.M. 72, 703 P.2d 169.

{9} We recently discussed the intent of the Implied Consent Act in some detail in Chakerian, 2015-NMCA-052, ¶¶ 14-18. We observed that, in enacting Section 66-8-109(B), the Legislature balanced its effort to deter and prosecute DWI with the ability of an arrested driver "to reasonably preserve and test the critical and potentially exonerating evidence" surrounding the chemical tests administered under the Implied Consent Act. Chakerian, 2015-NMCA-052, ¶ 18.

{10} In this context, the Legislature has adopted Section 66-8-109(B) that requires a law enforcement officer directing the administration of a chemical test under the Implied Consent Act to advise the person being tested "of the person's right to be given an opportunity to arrange for" a specified medical professional chosen by the person being tested "to perform a chemical test in addition to any test performed at the direction of a law enforcement officer." Section 66-8-109(B). The language of Section 66-8-109(B) does not guarantee that an independent test will be performed, even if requested by the person being tested. State v. Jones, 1998-NMCA-076, ¶ 24, 125 N.M. 556, 964 P.2d 117. Rather, it requires that law enforcement personnel provide a reasonable opportunity for the person being tested to arrange for an independent test. Id.

{11} In Jones, we held that a law enforcement officer did not afford a person to be tested a reasonable opportunity under Section 66-8-109(B) when the officer denied the person's request to call his doctor and denied him access to a telephone. Jones, 1998-NMCA-076, ¶ 25. In Chakerian, we considered whether the law enforcement officer provided a reasonable opportunity to the defendant to be tested when the officer gave the defendant a telephone and a Yellow Pages telephone directory in the early hours of the morning, and the defendant did not make arrangements for an independent test. 2015-NMCA-052, ¶¶ 4, 21. We held that the officer did not comply with the statutory requirement. Id. ¶ 23. Specifically, we stated that the officer had only provided the defendant "with a mere possibility of being able to arrange for an independent test," requiring that compliance with Section 66-8-109(B) demanded instead a "meaningful opportunity" to arrange for an independent test. Chakerian, 2015-NMCA-052, ¶ 22; but see id. ¶¶ 39-40 (Zamora, J., dissenting) (stating that the language of Section 66-8-109(B) requiring "an opportunity to make arrangements" does not import the word "meaningful" and disagreeing that Section 66-8-109(B) requires a "meaningful opportunity" (emphasis omitted)).

{12} The statutory sufficiency of Officer Lafave providing Defendant a telephone and a telephone directory in this case is not the issue. Defendant used the opportunity afforded him to arrange for an independent test. He called the hospital and was told by a nurse to come to the hospital to receive the test.

{13} Thus, different from Chakerian, the issue in this case is whether, by requiring in Section 66-8-109(B) that a law enforcement officer provide "an opportunity to arrange" for an independent test, the Legislature intended the language "an opportunity to arrange" to include the requirement that the officer transport a person being tested to a hospital to receive an independent test. We decline to reach that result.

{14} Most significantly, the statutory language does not state such a requirement. Harris v. Vasquez, 2012-NMCA-110, ¶ 10, 288 P.3d 924 ("[Appellate courts] will not read into a statute language that is not there[.]"). In the Implied Consent Act, the Legislature created the right of a person being tested to an independent test in a limited fashion. By way of contrast, it did not adopt the broader language adopted by some other states clearly stating the right to an independent test. See, e.g., N.J. Stat. Ann. § 39:4-50.2(c) (West 2008) ("In addition to the samples taken and tests made at the direction of a police officer hereunder, the person tested shall be permitted to have such samples taken and chemical tests of his breath, urine or blood made by a person or physician of his own selection."). Rather, the language of Section 66-8-109(B) states only that the directing law enforcement officer must advise a person to be tested of the "right to be given an opportunity to arrange for" an independent test.

{15} Because of this difference in statutory language, the cases from other states that Defendant cites in support of his position do not assist this Court in its determination. See Ward v. Alaska, 758 P.2d 87, 89-91 (Alaska 1988) (addressing an Alaska statute that stated that the person tested may have a qualified medical person "of the person's own choosing administer a chemical test in addition to the test administered at the direction of the law enforcement officer"); State v. Hughes, 352 S.E.2d 643, 644 (Ga. Ct. App. 1987) (interpreting a Georgia statute providing for the right to "have a . . . qualified person of his own choosing administer a chemical test or tests in addition to any administered at the direction of a law enforcement officer" (omission in original) (emphasis, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted)); People v. Underwood, 396 N.W.2d 443, 444 (Mich. Ct. App. 1986) (considering a Michigan statute that provided, in part, that a person being tested "shall be given a reasonable opportunity to have a person of his or her choosing administer [one] of the chemical tests described in this section" (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)), overruled on other grounds by People v. Anstey, 719 N.W.2d 579 (Mich. 2006); State v. Nicastro, 527 A.2d 492, 493-96 (N.J. Super. Ct. Law Div. 1986) (per curiam) (involving a New Jersey statute that provided that "the person tested shall be permitted to have such samples taken and chemical tests of his breath, urine or blood made by a person or physician of his own selection" (emphasis omitted)), disagreed with by State v. Ettore, 548 A.2d 1134 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1988).

{16} We consider the difference in statutory language from that of other states to be significant in that our Legislature selected limited language in adopting the right to an independent test. In Jones, we interpreted this language to require that persons to be tested be given "a reasonable opportunity to contact a qualified person of their choosing who may be able to perform the test." 1998-NMCA-076, ¶ 24. In Chakerian, we interpreted Section 66-8-109(B) to include an officer's duty to "meaningfully cooperate with an arrestee's express desire to arrange for" a test. Chakerian, 2015-NMCA-052, ¶ 19. Regardless of the manner in which we describe the duty of the law enforcement officer, the Legislature limited that duty to relate only to the "opportunity to arrange for" an independent test. Section 66-8-109(B). In this case, Defendant did "arrange for" an independent test, and he does not argue on appeal that he did not have the opportunity to do so. Thus, at the time that Defendant requested that he be transported to the hospital, he had already been afforded the right required by Section 66-8-109(B). His request for transportation, therefore, was in addition to, and an expansion of, the Section 66-8-109(B) right to have an opportunity to arrange for the test.

{17} We acknowledge the practical difficulties a person to be tested may have in obtaining an independent test. Indeed, when Defendant arrived at the hospital approximately fifteen to twenty minutes after he had called to arrange for a test, the emergency room doctor refused to administer the test. But, Section 66-8-109(B) does not require a directing law enforcement officer to fulfill arrangements made by the person to be tested. As we stated in Jones, Section 66-8-109(B) "does not guarantee the arrestee an additional test will be performed, but only that the arrestee will be given a reasonable opportunity to arrange for an additional test." Jones, 1998-NMCA-076, ¶ 24. Nor does it guarantee that when a person to be tested contacts a person qualified to perform the test that "the test will actually be performed by the person contacted." Id. If we were to read such requirements into Section 66-8-109(B) in order to correct practical difficulties in the operation of the statute, we would be wrongfully assuming the responsibility of the Legislature. Harris, 2012-NMCA-110, ¶ 10 ("[Appellate courts] will not read into a statute language that is not there[.]").

{18} Our reading of Section 66-8-109(B) is consistent with the balance the Legislature created in enacting Section 66-8-109(B). See Chakerian, 2015-NMCA-052, ¶ 18 ("On the one hand, the Legislature has provided the [s]tate with strong tools for deterring and prosecuting DWI offenses, and on the other hand, the Legislature has protected the rights of citizens by requiring the [s]tate to provide an arrestee with a meaningful opportunity to reasonably preserve and test the critical and potentially exonerating evidence."). Defendant used the opportunity afforded him to arrange for an independent test as required by the statute. From its plain language, the Legislature did not intend more. We do not agree with Defendant's interpretation that would require law enforcement officers to transport arrested drivers to locations of the drivers' choosing, removing the officers from their regular law enforcement responsibilities.[1] Montoya v. McManus, 1961-NMSC-060, ¶ 36, 68 N.M. 381, 362 P.2d 771 ("An interpretation of a statute will never be adopted which will render the application thereof absurd or unreasonable.").

{19} Nor do we believe that Section 66-8-109(E) bears on the issue. That section provides that if a person being tested has an independent test performed, the law enforcement agency of the officer directing the test shall pay for the cost of the independent test. Indeed, that section emphasizes the importance of the right to the person being tested, Chakerian, 2015-NMCA-052, ¶ 18, but it does not expand upon the right stated in Section 66-8-109(B).

CONCLUSION

{20} The Implied Consent Act does not require a law enforcement officer directing chemical testing of a driver arrested on suspicion of DWI to transport the driver to another location to receive an independent test that the driver has arranged. We reverse the district court's order suppressing the breath test samples taken by Officer Lafave and remand for further proceedings.

{21} IT IS SO ORDERED.

Timothy L. Garcia, Judge

{1} We now consider the correct unit of prosecution for distribution of child pornography under NMSA 1978, Section 30-6A-3(B) (2007), part of the Sexual Exploitation of Children Act, NMSA 1978, §§ 30-6A-1 to -4 (1984, as amended through 2007) (the Act), as the Act is applied to the facts in this case. Defendant Gilbert Sena conditionally pled guilty to ten counts of distribution of child pornography after a police officer used peer-to-peer software on two occasions to download ten separate still images of child pornography located in a "shared" file on Defendant's computer.

{2} After considering the Supreme Court's analysis and ruling in State v. Olsson, 2014-NMSC-012, 324 P.3d 1230, we hold that Section 30-6A-3(B) is ambiguous. In addition, the legislative history and purpose of the statute does not provide a clear legislative intent for defining the unit of prosecution regarding the possession or distribution of child pornography and the test for distinctness, articulated in Herron v. State, 1991-NMSC-012, ¶ 15, 111 N.M. 357, 805 P.2d 624, does not apply in this case. Because we also apply the rule of lenity to the multiple charges filed in this case, we hold that Defendant may only be convicted of one count of distribution of child pornography.

A. District Court Proceedings

{3} This case arose after Defendant acquired and retained possession of several digital images of child pornography through peer-to-peer software and stored these images on the hard drive of his computer in a "shared" file, thus allowing other users of this peer-to-peer software to download the images stored in the shared file on Defendant's computer. Los Lunas Police Officer Aaron Chavez was monitoring child pornography on the internet when he discovered that Defendant possessed several images of child pornography on his computer. On October 21, 2010, Officer Chavez used peer-to-peer software to locate and download three separate still images of child pornography from the shared file on Defendant's computer. On November 4, 2010, Officer Chavez again used the peer-to-peer software to download an additional seven separate still images of child pornography from the shared file on Defendant's computer. Based upon the content of the shared file on Defendant's computer, he was indicted for twenty counts of possession of child pornography, contrary to Section 30-6A-3(A), and ten counts of distribution of child pornography, contrary to Section 30-6A-3(B).

{4} On September 6, 2013, Defendant initially pled guilty to all ten counts of distribution of child pornography. Each count was represented by a still image that Officer Chavez downloaded from the shared file on Defendant's computer and separately identified in the grand jury indictment. Sentencing on the ten counts was postponed until April 28, 2014. On April 21, 2014, the Supreme Court issued its opinion in the Olsson case, addressing the statutory construction of Section 30-6A-3(A) regarding the unit of prosecution for possession of child pornography, and held that the rule of lenity applies to the possession of multiple images of child pornography. Olsson, 2014-NMSC-012, ¶ 2, (consolidating the appeals filed by two separate defendants, James Olsson and Willard Ballard). Olsson did not specifically address the application of its holding to related issues involving distribution of child pornography. Id. The parties agreed to amend Defendant's plea agreement to make it a conditional plea, allowing Defendant to appeal the issue of whether the Supreme Court's holding in Olsson (specifically referring to defendant Ballard whose case was consolidated with defendant Olsson) also applied to multiple convictions for distribution of child pornography. Defendant then filed this appeal.

B. Arguments on Appeal

{5} The issue presented is whether subsequent access or transfer of Defendant's shared file images, that a third party is capable of accomplishing without Defendant's further knowledge or involvement, support separate and distinct charges for distribution of child pornography against Defendant. Defendant argues that charging for distribution of child pornography under Section 30-6A-3(B) should be controlled by Olsson, and, as a result, he can only be convicted on a single count based upon the one "shared" file created on his computer. By pleading guilty, Defendant stipulated that possessing child pornography images in a "shared" file accessible on peer-to-peer software that third parties can download did create a sufficient factual basis to support a charge of distribution of child pornography. Defendant argues that the act of making this singular file available for download was a unitary act and this was his only act of distribution under the facts in this case. In addition, Defendant also argues that the act of distribution is not inherently committed one image at a time, the statutory definition utilized to determine the unit of prosecution for distribution of child pornography is ambiguous, and the rule of lenity must be applied in this case.

{6} The State asserts this case is controlled by State v. Leeson, 2011-NMCA-068, 149 N.M. 823, 255 P.3d 401, and that Defendant's ten convictions did not violate double jeopardy. It argues that the legislative intent behind the statute criminalizing distribution of child pornography is to protect children from continued exploitation through dissemination of the recorded images of their abuse, and the file sharing that occurred in this case is the type of dissemination the statute prohibits. The State argues that—just like in Leeson, where we held that the defendant could be charged separately for each image created—a separate charge is appropriate for each image of child pornography that is distributed. The State acknowledges our Supreme Court's holding in Olsson but argues that the Olsson decision should be limited solely to the unit of prosecution for possession of child pornography. Accordingly, the State requests that all of Defendant's convictions be affirmed.

DISCUSSION

A. Standard of Review

{7} Under the Act, issues regarding the unit of prosecution are addressed as a matter of law and subject to de novo review. Olsson, 2014-NMSC-012, ¶ 14. We now address the district court's decision de novo.

B. Units of Prosecution Under Olsson and Leeson

{8} Double jeopardy protects defendants against multiple punishments for the same offense. N.M. Const. art. II, § 15; State v. Pierce, 1990-NMSC-049,¶ 33, 110 N.M. 76, 792 P.2d 408; see Benton v. Maryland, 395 U.S. 784, 786 (1969). The number of separate acts that may be prosecuted under one criminal statute, known as a unit of prosecution case, is a scenario that can trigger a double jeopardy violation. Leeson, 2011-NMCA-068,¶ 13. In unit of prosecution cases, the defendant is charged with multiple violations of a single statute based upon acts that may or may not be considered a single course of conduct. State v. Barr, 1999-NMCA-081, ¶ 11, 127 N.M. 504, 984 P.2d 185. To determine the correct unit of prosecution, the relevant inquiry is "whether the [L]egislature intended punishment for the entire course of conduct or for each discrete act" undertaken by a defendant. Swafford v. State, 1991-NMSC-043, ¶ 8, 112 N.M. 3, 810 P.2d 1223.

{9} To determine the legislative intent for establishing the unit of prosecution in any particular case, the courts employ a two-part test. State v. Gallegos, 2011-NMSC-027, ¶ 31, 149 N.M. 704, 254 P.3d 655. First, courts look to the plain language of the statute to determine if the Legislature has defined the unit of prosecution. State v. Swick, 2012-NMSC-018, ¶ 33, 279 P.3d 747. If so, the inquiry is complete and proceeds no further. Id. If the unit of prosecution is not clearly defined in the plain language of the statute, courts usually proceed to analyze whether a defendant's acts are separated by sufficient "indicia of distinctness" to justify multiple punishments. Gallegos, 2011-NMSC-027, ¶ 31 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). In determining distinctness, the district court reviews six factors that were originally articulated in Herron. 1991-NMSC-012, ¶ 15. As applied to the Act, the Herron factors are described to be: (1) time between criminal acts, (2) location of the victim during each act, (3) existence of any intervening events, (4) distinctions in the manner of committing the acts, (5) the defendant's intent, and (6) the number of victims. See Olsson, 2014-NMSC-012, ¶ 32. If there is not sufficient distinctness between the acts that are separately charged, the rule of lenity applies. Herron, 1991-NMSC-012, ¶ 14. Under the rule of lenity, doubt is resolved in a defendant's favor and against turning a single act into multiple offenses. Id.

{10} Two New Mexico cases have provided specific guidance regarding the unit of prosecution for charges under the Act. See Olsson, 2014-NMSC-012; Leeson, 2011-NMCA-068. In Olsson, our Supreme Court considered the unit of prosecution issue as applied to possession of child pornography. 2014-NMSC-012, ¶ 1. In Leeson, this Court considered the unit of prosecution issue as applied to manufacturing of child pornography. 2011-NMCA-068, ¶ 17. Neither court addressed the unit of prosecution issue as applied to the distribution of child pornography.

{11} In Olsson, our Supreme Court held that the statutory language addressing possession of child pornography was ambiguous. 2014-NMSC-012, ¶ 2. An ambiguity existed because the statutory definition for what constitutes a "visual or print medium" contains both singular types of images, such as a photograph or slide, and multiple types of images, such as a book, diskette, or film. Id. ¶ 20; Section 30-6A-2(B). Given this contrast, a plain meaning as to the correct unit of prosecution for possession of child pornography was not readily apparent. Olsson, 2014-NMSC-012, ¶ 20. Additionally, our Supreme Court found that the legislative history and purpose of Section 30-6A-3 do not define a clear unit of prosecution and that the Herron test of distinctness does not apply in possession cases. Olsson, 2014-NMSC-012, ¶¶ 31, 42. It determined that the Herron factors apply where a defendant has direct contact with a victim, but these factors do not translate to possession cases because many of the factors are irrelevant to possession or are inconclusive if applicable. Olsson, 2014-NMSC-012, ¶ 39. Because the statutory language was "insurmountably ambiguous" and the indicia of distinctness factors could not be applied in possession cases, the rule of lenity was applied in the defendant's favor. Id. ¶¶ 43, 45. Thus, the Court held that only one count of possession of child pornography could be imposed. Id. ¶ 47.

{12} In Leeson, this Court considered the unit of prosecution as applied to the act of manufacturing child pornography. 2011-NMCA-068, ¶ 17. This Court found that the unit of prosecution for manufacturing child pornography under Section 30-6A-3(D) was readily discernible and that a separate charge could be brought for each image created. Leeson, 2011-NMCA-068, ¶ 17. To manufacture is specifically defined in the Act as engaging in "the production, processing, copying by any means, printing, packaging, or repackaging of any visual or print medium" depicting child pornography. Section 30-6A-2(D). Thus, under a plain language analysis of this separate statutory wording, each photograph taken is a distinct action involving a victim and a distinct violation of the statute. Leeson, 2011-NMCA-068, ¶ 17. As a result, this Court determined that the prosecution of the act of manufacturing each separate photograph did not violate double jeopardy. Id. ¶ 20.

C. The Unit of Prosecution for Distribution of Child Pornography

{13} To determine the unit of prosecution for distribution of child pornography, we must now consider the language of Section 30-6A-3(B) and try to give effect to the legislative intent. Leeson, 2011-NMCA-068, ¶ 14. "If the statute does not clearly define the unit of prosecution, we must determine whether the different offenses are separated by sufficient indicia of distinctness." Id. (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

{14} Section 30-6A-3(B) states:

> It is unlawful for a person to intentionally distribute any obscene visual or print medium depicting any prohibited sexual act or simulation of such an act if that person knows or has reason to know that the obscene medium depicts any prohibited sexual act or simulation of such act and if that person knows or has reason to know that one or more of the participants in that act is a child under eighteen years of age.
> "[V]isual or print medium" is defined as:
> (1) any film, photograph, negative, slide, computer diskette, videotape, videodisc or any computer or electronically generated imagery; or
> (2) any book, magazine or other form of publication or photographic reproduction containing or incorporating any film, photograph, negative, slide, computer diskette, videotape, videodisc or any computer generated or electronically generated imagery[.]

Section 30-6A-2(B).

{15} The wording used in Section 30-6A-3(B) for distribution of child pornography is the exact same language used in Section 30-6A-3(A) regarding possession of child pornography except for one word; the word "distribute" is used in place of the word "possess." Neither "possess" nor "distribute" is defined elsewhere in the Act. Because the identical statutory language is utilized by the Legislature, we conclude that our Supreme Court's analysis in Olsson is the most applicable statutory construction precedent and Olsson should guide our analysis in the present case. We hold that the use of the word "distribute" in Section 30-6A-3(B) in place of the word "possess" under Section 30-6A-3(A) reflects an identical ambiguity with regard to the interpretation of the unit of prosecution. Therefore, consistent with Olsson, we agree that the statutory language in Section 30-6A-3(B) is ambiguous regarding the intended unit of prosecution for distribution of child pornography. Olsson, 2014-NMSC-012, ¶ 23. As recognized in Olsson, the same controlling definition of "visual or print medium" that is set forth in Section 30-6A-2(B) of the Act, providing for both singular and multiple types of images, also applies to factual scenarios involving acts of distribution rather than simple possession. Olsson, 2014-NMSC-012, ¶ 20. The history and purpose of Section 30-6A-3 discussed in Olsson similarly fails to provide further guidance as to a clear unit of prosecution in either scenario. 2014-NMSC-012, ¶ 29.

{16} While distribution may align with possession in certain factual scenarios, we must address how both may differ with manufacturing under Leeson. The language of Section 30-6A-3(D) for the manufacture of child pornography differs from the language for possession and distribution. Notably, Section 30-6A-3(D) defines manufacture somewhat differently than possession and distribution, and Section 30-6A-2(D) provides a more specific and detailed definition for the word "manufacture." This Court recognized that this more specific definition of "manufacture" provides the proper unit of prosecution as to each image manufactured. Leeson, 2011-NMCA-068, ¶ 17. Both distribution and possession lack this additional defined clarity. Furthermore, this Court in Leeson distinguished manufacturing from possession, noting having been troubled by what the Legislature intended by the word "possess" and "questioned whether [it] meant to criminalize the possession of a collection of child pornography or the possession of each individual image within a collection." Id. ¶ 19. Because the statutory definition of distribution is similarly ambiguous and applies the identical definition for "visual or print medium" used to define possession, our holding in Leeson only confirms the same concerns that were addressed and resolved by our Supreme Court in Olsson.

{17} With the unit of prosecution for distribution of child pornography unclear from the statute and legislative history, we must ultimately consider whether Defendant's acts have sufficient distinctness to justify multiple punishments. As concluded in Olsson, the Herron factors to determine distinctness should apply when a defendant is charged with having direct contact with the victim. Distribution of child pornography does not entail direct contact with a child victim and Defendant was not charged with any direct contact with a victim in this case.

{18} Assuming without deciding that an individual receiving a distribution of child pornography can be considered "a separate type of victim" under Section 30-6A-3(B) and the Herron factors should be applied, Defendant's actions in this case were not shown to be distinct with regard to any images placed in the "shared" file. No multiplicity of separate actions was alleged to have occurred. No evidence was presented to establish that Defendant personally sent any image to a third party. Even Officer Chavez established that he could download one or more of the images located in Defendant's shared file at any one time, without any indicia of distinctiveness that can be attributed to Defendant. Therefore, we determine that the Herron factors to establish distinctness, if applicable to separate acts of distribution of child pornography, did not exist in this case.

{19} Finally, we turn to the rule of lenity. Just as the rule of lenity was applied to the ambiguity regarding the unit of prosecution in Olsson, it also applies to Defendant's actions regarding the distribution of child pornography in this case. 2014-NMSC-012, ¶ 45. Defendant created one distinct computer file containing multiple images of child pornography. Defendant does not dispute that he committed an act of distribution of child pornography by making his file accessible through peer-to-peer sharing software. Defendant did not perform any other readily discernible act that would justify a separate, distinct, additional charge of distribution. The rule of lenity applies to limit the number of charges and convictions upon which Defendant may be found guilty. That number is one. The indirect actions of accessing Defendant's shared computer file by Officer Chavez do not support additional charges of distribution under the current statutory language of Section 30-6A-3(B). Accordingly, to prevent double jeopardy, Defendant's ten convictions for distribution of child pornography are now reduced to one.

{20} This Court does not address, and is specifically reserving the question of, whether multiple actions undertaken by some other defendant to affirmatively share images of child pornography with a third party may constitute separate acts of sufficient distinctiveness to warrant multiple units of prosecution for the distribution of child pornography under the Act and the current statutory language of Section 30-6A-3(B). As our Supreme Court respectfully recommended in Olsson , this Court also requests that the Legislature consider clarification and specificity regarding the intended unit of prosecution for possession of child pornography and the distribution of child pornography, especially in light of rapidly advancing technology and changes in society regarding the use of the internet.

CONCLUSION

{21} For the reasons set forth herein, we reverse all but one of Defendant's convictions for distribution of child pornography. We further remand this case to the district court to correct Defendant's judgment and sentence and to conduct any further proceedings that may be necessary to effectuate this Court's decision.
