I have a friend, let’s call him Joe, who decided in mid-2020 that it was time to retire from the practice of law. Joe’s idea was to close his full-time practice by the end of 2020, shut the lights to his office, “turn-in” his law license, and pursue all the personal passions that he believed he had let drift over 30+ years of practicing law. But as his workload began to decrease, and he started to think about the satisfaction he derived from helping others in his practice, Joe began to wonder if there was something in-between; a way to slow down and take more time for personal pursuits, but still stay engaged at some level in the practice of law. As it turns out, Joe had a number of options which any attorney thinking of “retiring” might well consider. As with anything, each has benefits and costs.

Option 1: Keep an active law license but take on less work.

Nothing requires an active licensed lawyer to work full-time. By simply reducing one’s workload, a lawyer can provide more opportunities to pursue “off-duty” passions. The benefit of this approach is that the lawyer can grow or shrink the workload to suit the lawyer’s needs and taste. Of course, maintaining an active license means that the lawyer must continue to pay the full licensing, disciplinary and client protection fund fees, which combined are currently $420 annually, and pay for and complete at least 12 hours of continuing legal education annually, at least 2 hours of which must be in courses dealing with ethics and professionalism, and only 4 of which can be completed by self-study. While this may not be a true retirement, it provides great flexibility for a lawyer who is not ready to stop practicing but, nevertheless, wants to “slow down.”

Option 2: Work under the Legal Services Provider Limited Law License Rule.

Pursuant to Rule 15-301.2, NMRA, an attorney who has taken inactive status in New Mexico can apply to the New Mexico Supreme Court for a legal services provider limited law license. The applicant-attorney must also apply for a character and fitness investigation with the New Mexico Board of Bar Examiners. If approved, the applicant-attorney can then provide a broad range of legal services to clients in New Mexico, whether for monetary compensation or otherwise, through a qualified legal services provider. A qualified legal services provider is a not-for-profit legal services organization: (a) whose primary purpose is to provide legal services to low-income clients; (b) is classified as a Section 501(c)(3) organization under the Internal Revenue Code: (c) is registered with the New Mexico Attorney General Registry of Charitable Organizations; and (d) has been recommended by the New Mexico Commission on Access to Justice.

Licensees under this Rule are required to pay a reduced annual licensing fee, currently $125, and pay for and complete 12 hours of continuing legal education annually, at least 2 hours of which must be in courses dealing with ethics and professionalism, and only 4 of which can be completed by self-study, but their disciplinary fee, currently $150 per year, and their annual client protection fund fee, currently $15 per year, are waived. The license remains effective unless the licensee terminates employment with the qualified legal services provider and does not immediately apply to and be selected for employment with another qualified legal services provider, or is otherwise reinstated to active status.

Option 3: Work under the Emeritus Attorney Rule.

Rule 24-111, NMRA defines an Emeritus Attorney as “an attorney who is or was a licensed attorney in good standing in the State of New Mexico or other jurisdiction who voluntarily withdrew from the practice of law or transferred to inactive status and does not ask for or receive compensation of any kind for the performance of legal services, but who is granted permission . . . to participate in the emeritus pro bono program . . . “ If approved by the New Mexico Supreme Court following a motion for approval, an Emeritus Attorney working in association with an approved legal aid organization and under the supervision of an active licensed attorney can:

- * Appear in any court or before any administrative tribunal in New Mexico on behalf of a client of an approved legal aid organization provided the client has consented in writing to that appearance and the supervising attorney has given written approval for that appearance;
- * Prepare pleadings and other documents to file in any court or before any administrative tribunal in New

Attorneys who are in inactive status are not required to pay

Attorneys who are in inactive status are not required to pay

$100 annually, unless they are over 70 years of age. The annual fee is waived for inactive members over age 70. Inactive members are also exempt from annual continuing education

While inactive, the member cannot practice law in New Mexico or in any other jurisdiction under the member's New Mexico license but can serve on Supreme Court and State Bar committees, boards, commissions, or other working groups designed to improve the legal profession unless otherwise prohibited by Court order or rule. Inactive members also retain certain other member benefits, including electronic access to the Bar Bulletin and Fastcase legal research, and the option to audit most CLE programs offered by the State Bar Foundation Center for Legal Education.

Option 5: Withdraw.
Finally, some may decide that that they really do want to stop practicing law "forever." That person can file with the New Mexico Supreme Court a written notice of voluntary withdrawal. If approved by the Court, the person completely forfeits his/her law license and must immediately cease the practice of law. Of course, he/she is no longer required to pay annual fees nor complete annual continuing education requirements. But unlike inactive status, where one can petition to reactivate, if an attorney withdraws, he/she can only return to the practice of law in New Mexico by again taking the bar exam or qualifying under the rules governing reciprocity admission, and in either case will have to undergo a full character and fitness evaluation by the Board of Bar Examiners. In other words, he/she must "start over."

So, what did my friend Joe do? First, he realized, for the first time in his legal career, that paring back his workload was an option. For him, law practice had always been a "light-switch,” either on or off. Now he understood that it did not have to be that way. Second, he realized that he was not ready to completely stop practicing. Armed with these realizations, Joe kept his active license, reduced his workload, and entered the next chapter of his legal career in what he calls "semi-retirement.” While that was the right choice for Joe, it may or may not be for you when you think about "retiring.” What is important is for you to know that you have options when you write your next chapter.2

On Jan. 11, 2022, Frederick Martin Rowe peacefully passed away at the age of 96. He was born on January 18th, 1925, in Mannheim, Germany to Isidore and Rose Rosenstock. In 1936 his family immigrated to the United States and settled in the Bronx, New York. In 1944 Fred was drafted into the U.S. Army, where his first assignment was the tank destroyer unit in Fort Hood, Texas. Upon learning that he spoke German, French and Yiddish, he was asked to join the Military Training Center in Fort Ritchie, MD. (Subject of the CBS 60 Minutes documentary, "The Ritchie Boys"). He obtained the rank of Captain of Military Intelligence. He was first stationed in Paris and then was sent to the Ardennes region of Belgium, where he gathered frontline intelligence during the Battle of the Bulge. After Germany surrendered in 1944, he met his future wife, Franziska Elizabet Rupp. She was an accomplished athlete, who competed in the 1942 Axis Games in the uneven parallel bars and placed 2nd in the 100-meter dash. In 1944, she was drafted to teach German Luftwaffe pilots how to fly gliders. Fred and Frances returned to the United States and married in 1947. Fred attended City College of New York on the G.I. Bill, graduating Magna Cum Laude. He then went to Yale Law School where he became Executive Editor of the Yale Law Review. He graduated in 1952 – the first Jewish student to graduate #1 in his class. From 1952-1953, he clerked for Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark and, in 1953, he joined the Washington D.C. law firm of Kirkland & Ellis, where he specialized in Antitrust & Trade Regulation. In 1962, he wrote his first and only book, “Price Discrimination Under the Robinson Patman Act.” It never made the best seller list, but it did make him enough money to buy his dream car, a 1963 Porsche 356 Roadster. During his career, he argued and won five cases before the Supreme Court. In the 1980's, he went on sabbatical, teaching at Yale, Harvard and the London School of Economics. In 1990, he and Frances moved to Santa Fe. It was here that he started his work as a community activist. He helped organize the Greater Callecita Neighborhood Association, the Neighborhood Network, the No-SLAPP Alliance, and the Neighborhood Law Center. In 1996, at the age of 71, he passed the New Mexico Bar Exam, becoming the oldest person in NM to have ever done so. He was also responsible for getting the New Mexico Legislature to pass anti-SLAPP suit legislation in New Mexico. In 1997, Mayor Larry Delgado of Santa Fe declared April 18 as “Frederick Rowe Day.” Fred loved his blues and jazz records, (having seen Duke Ellington and Count Basie many times as a youth in Harlem, NY), his daily 6 a.m. swim at Ft. Marcy, his New York Times and Wall Street Journal and eating out with his family at Santa Fe’s numerous restaurants. He was a man of few words and loved by many. Fred was preceded in death by his loving wife Frances, who passed away on July 20, 2015, and with whom he wished to be interred, and his brothers Henry and Raymond. He is survived by his son Geoffrey Rowe, and wife Darlene, their children Ashley and Christopher Rowe, his daughter Stephanie Rowe, and her son Jason Windmoeller and wife Kathryn and three great grandchildren Charleston, Broderick and Prescot. The family would like to give their deepest appreciation to Irene Barela for lovingly and tirelessly caring for our father and mother for many years. Interment and memorial service for Fred and Frances will be scheduled at the Santa Fe National Cemetery at a later date.

Nancy Sharp Nti Asare, born Sept. 2, 1952, passed away at the age of 69 on Dec. 25, 2021, in Accra, Ghana. She is survived by her husband, Richard, three children, Lydia, Isak, Anna Malaiika, six grandchildren and two sisters, Sallie and Mary Jo. Nti Asare was, first and foremost, a proud mother. Her committed work as a social justice advocate, diplomat, and humanitarian was an inspiration to all who knew her. A professor of law in colleges and universities around the world, Nti Asare had a passion for exposing injustices and promoting the rule of law. Her efforts in Iraq, Afghanistan, and South Sudan demonstrate her characteristic fearlessness, as well as her adventurous spirit which led her to love traveling, scuba diving, and hiking. She enjoyed gardening in her spare time, and was a ravenous learner, always eager to embark upon a new project. Friends and family will remember her great sense of humor, her plucky remarks, and the fun she could bring to most any situation.

IVES, Judge.

[1] In this foreclosure action, Defendants Bernie and Michael Trisell appeal the district court’s entry of summary judgment for Plaintiff Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae), arguing that (1) Plaintiff lacked standing, (2) the district court erred by entering summary judgment against Defendants on their affirmative defenses, and (3) the district court should have allowed Defendants to conduct additional discovery before ruling on Plaintiff’s summary judgment motion. Unpersuaded, we affirm.

[2] However, we acknowledge that precedents from our Supreme Court and this Court are unclear on a pivotal issue in this case: the allocation of summary judgment burdens where the plaintiff is the moving party. We therefore issue this precedential opinion to explain our understanding that, in New Mexico, once a plaintiff-movant has made a prima facie case on its claim alone, a defendant resisting summary judgment with an affirmative defense has the burden of demonstrating a genuine issue of material fact as to the defense. Applying that rule to this case, we hold that Defendants failed to carry their burden and thus failed to overcome Plaintiff’s prima facie showing of entitlement to judgment on its claim.

BACKGROUND

[3] In 2008, Defendants executed a promissory note in favor of Lewallen Mortgage, Inc., secured by a mortgage that Defendants executed that same day. By August 2010, a different mortgage company, SunTrust Mortgage, Inc., was servicing Defendants’ loan, and Defendants contacted SunTrust to discuss a recent increase in the amount of their monthly loan payment. Defendants later failed to remit the installment that was due on January 1, 2011, and asked SunTrust to modify the loan. SunTrust declined and, in February 2011, notified Defendants that their loan was in default. After it had been assigned the mortgage, SunTrust brought a foreclosure action against Defendants. SunTrust eventually assigned the mortgage to Plaintiff, and Plaintiff was substituted for SunTrust as the plaintiff. The original foreclosure action was dismissed without prejudice for lack of prosecution in November 2015.

[4] Plaintiff initiated the present foreclosure action in March 2016. Plaintiff attached to its complaint a copy of the promissory note, which SunTrust had indorsed in blank, along with an allonge showing a special indorsement from Lewallen to Suntrust. Defendants raised thirteen affirmative defenses in their answer. Plaintiff moved for summary judgment on the claim in its complaint and on Defendants’ affirmative defenses. In their response, Defendants, while elaborating upon only some of their affirmative defenses, argued that summary judgment was improper because Plaintiff had failed to make a prima facie showing of entitlement to summary judgment on those defenses. After Plaintiff filed its reply, the district court allowed both parties to file sur-replies. Following a hearing, the district court granted the motion and entered judgment for Plaintiff. Defendant appeal.

DISCUSSION

I. Standard of Review

[5] “We review the district court’s grant of summary judgment de novo.” HSBC Bank USA v. Wiles, 2020-NMCA-035, ¶ 8, 468 P.3d 922, cert. denied, 2020-NMCERT-___ (No. S-1-SC-38290, June 8, 2020). Summary judgment is appropriate where “there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and . . . the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law.” Rule 1-056(C) NMRA. We “review the whole record in the light most favorable to the party opposing summary judgment to determine if there is any evidence that places a genuine issue of material fact in dispute.” Wiles, 2020-NMCA-035, ¶ 8 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

[6] A summary judgment movant bears the “initial burden of establishing a prima facie case for summary judgment.” Romero v. Philip Morris Inc., 2010-NMSC-035, ¶ 10, 148 N.M. 713, 242 P.3d 280. A movant establishes a prima facie case when the motion is supported by “such evidence as is sufficient in law to raise a presumption of fact or establish the fact in question unless rebutted.” Id. (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). “[U]ntil a party has made a prima facie showing that it is entitled to summary judgment, the nonmoving party is not required to make any showing with respect to factual issues.” Knapp v. Fraternal Order of Eagles, 1987-NMCA-064, ¶ 9, 106 N.M. 11, 738 P.2d 129. When “the facts are not in dispute,” a court’s only task is to determine the “legal effect of [those] facts.” Koenig v. Perez, 1986-NMSC-066, ¶ 10, 104 N.M. 664, 726 P.2d 341.
II. The District Court Did Not Err by Granting Plaintiff’s Motion for Summary Judgment

[7] We affirm the district court’s entry of summary judgment, holding that (A) Plaintiff had standing; (B) Defendants bore the burden of showing that a genuine dispute of material fact on their affirmative defenses precluded summary judgment and their contentions that they met this burden do not merit review; and (C) Defendants failed to preserve their argument that the district court erred by not allowing Defendants to conduct additional discovery before ruling on Plaintiff’s summary judgment motion.

A. Plaintiff Had Standing

[8] Standing to foreclose depends on whether the foreclosing party can “demonstrate that it had the right to enforce the note and the right to foreclose the mortgage at the time the foreclosure suit was filed.” PNC Mortg. v. Romero, 2016-NMCA-064, ¶ 19, 377 P.3d 461 (alteration, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted). To establish its right to enforce the promissory note underlying the mortgage, a third party seeking foreclosure must prove that, “at the time of filing,” Deutsche Bank Nat’l Tr. Co. v. Johnston, 2016-NMSC-013, ¶ 27, 369 P.3d 1046 (emphasis omitted), it had “both physical possession and the right to enforcement through either a proper indorsement or a transfer by negotiation.” Bank of N.Y. v. Romero, 2014-NMSC-007, ¶ 21, 320 P.3d 1.

The “holder” of the note has a right to enforce it and foreclose the mortgage. See NMSA 1978, ¶ 55-3-301 (1992) (providing that the “holder of [an] instrument” is a person entitled to enforce it); Johnston, 2016-NMSC-013, ¶ 14 (explaining that the statutory definition of who may enforce a note guides the determination of whether a particular plaintiff has established “an injury in fact sufficient to confer standing” to foreclose); Wiles, 2020-NMCA-035, ¶¶ 12-13 (affirming “the long-standing principle that ‘the mortgage follows the note’”). The Uniform Commercial Code defines “holder” as “the person in possession of a negotiable instrument that is payable either to bearer or to an identified person that is the person in possession[,]” NMSA 1978, § 5-1-201(b)(21)(A) (2005). Accordingly, a foreclosing party may establish that it is the holder of a note—and therefore entitled to enforce it—by attaching to the initial complaint a note that is indorsed to the foreclosing party or in blank. See Johnston, 2016-NMSC-013, ¶ 23 (explaining that a foreclosing party may establish its right to enforce the note by “attaching a note containing an undated indorsement to the initial complaint”).

[9] Here, Plaintiff demonstrated that it had standing to foreclose by attaching a note containing a blank indorsement to its initial complaint. See generally Bank of N.Y., 2014-NMSC-007, ¶ 24 (“A blank indorsement, as its name suggests, does not identify a person to whom the instrument is payable but instead makes it payable to anyone who holds it as bearer paper.”). Although Defendants do not contest that the note attached to the initial complaint was indorsed in blank, Defendants argue that Plaintiff failed to prove its right to enforce the note because Plaintiff did not demonstrate a transfer of the note or that it was the holder. Compare Wiles, 2020-NMCA-035, ¶ 10 (holding that the plaintiff “established a prima facie case of standing when it ‘attached a copy of the note indorsed in blank to its complaint’”), with Los Alamos Nat’l Bank v. Velasquez, 2019-NMCA-040, ¶ 16, 446 P.3d 1220 (analyzing whether there was evidence “to establish that [the plaintiff] had possession of the note at the time it filed the complaint” because the note “was neither attached to the initial complaint nor dated”), cert. denied, 2019-NMCERT-159 (No. S-1-SC-37688, Aug. 5, 2019). Defendants argue that this case is similar to others where there was insufficient evidence to demonstrate that the plaintiff had a right to enforce the note. However, this case is unlike the cases on which Defendants rely because here Plaintiff attached a note containing a blank indorsement to its initial complaint. See PNC Mortg., 2016-NMCA-064, ¶ 25; Johnston, 2016-NMSC-013, ¶ 25; Bank of N.Y., 2014-NMSC-007, ¶ 10, 23. Because Defendants did not present any evidence to rebut Plaintiff’s prima facie case of standing, cf. Wiles, 2020-NMCA-035, ¶ 4-5 (explaining that the defendant used discovery to inspect his loan file at the office of the plaintiff’s counsel and uncover evidence to support his position, though unmeritorious, that there was a genuine issue of material fact regarding the plaintiff’s standing to foreclose), we hold that Plaintiff had standing to enforce the note and foreclose the mortgage.

B. Defendants Have Not Shown That the District Court Erred by Concluding That Defendants Failed to Carry Their Burden to Avoid Summary Judgment on Their Affirmative Defenses

[10] Our holding that Plaintiff had standing resolves the only disputed issue regarding the adequacy of Plaintiff’s prima facie case on its foreclosure claim. But Defendants argue that, regardless of whether Plaintiff established standing, Plaintiff failed to shoulder an additional burden regarding Defendants’ affirmative defenses and therefore Plaintiff never established a prima facie case for summary judgment. Specifically, Defendants contend that, under Fidelity National Bank v. Tommy L. Goff, Inc. (Goff), 1978-NMSC-074, ¶ 10, 8-9, 92 N.M. 106, 583 P.2d 470, to make a prima facie case for summary judgment, Plaintiff was required to show that there was no genuine issue of material fact as to Defendants’ affirmative defenses. If Defendants are correct, then the next step in our analysis is to determine whether Plaintiff carried that burden. But if Defendants are incorrect, then Plaintiff successfully shifted the burden to Defendants when it made a prima facie case for judgment on its claim, and the next (and final) step in our analysis is to determine whether Defendants showed that a genuine issue of material fact as to any of their affirmative defenses precluded summary judgment.

[11] In Goff, our Supreme Court held that, even though the defendant had provided no “factual amplification” of the twelve affirmative defenses asserted in his answer, the burden was on the plaintiff to contravene each of the affirmative defenses in its motion for summary judgment. Id. ¶¶ 2-5, 9, 11-12. With this holding, the Court overruled Kassel v. Anderson, 1973-NMCA-028, 84 N.M. 697, 507 P.2d 444, in which this Court held that the “bare contention” of affirmative defenses in the defendant’s amended answer were “insufficient to defeat” the plaintiffs’ summary judgment motion because the plaintiffs had made the requisite prima facie showing. Goff, 1978-NMSC-074, ¶ 10. In contrast, the Goff Court reasoned that the defendant’s “avertion of affirmative defenses” required the plaintiff “to produce the necessary affidavits or other material to expose [the] affirmative defenses as unmerited.” Id. ¶ 9. Thus, under Goff, to overcome unclear or conclusory affirmative defenses and obtain summary
Having concluded that the plaintiff had made a prima facie case for summary judgment, the Court proceeded to analyze whether the defendant had introduced sufficient evidence to overcome the plaintiff’s prima facie case, ultimately reversing the entry of summary judgment because the defendant had introduced an affidavit and deposition testimony that “raise[d] a genuine issue of fact as to” “the accord-and-satisfaction defense.” Id. ¶¶ 12-16.

[15] This Court took the same approach in Galef, reasoning that, once the plaintiff “moved for summary judgment on his claim” for a charging order, “[i]t was incumbent on [the d]efendants to make a factual showing regarding the elements of [their affirmative defenses].” 1994-NMCA-068, ¶ 1, 12-13. Because the record before the Court indicated that the defendants had not met that burden, the Court affirmed the entry of summary judgment for the plaintiff. Id. ¶¶ 10-14.

[16] We read the opinions in Mayfield Smithson Enterprises, Biava, and Galef to place the burden with respect to affirmative defenses on the defense, but we acknowledge that a different reading is possible. The primary basis for an alternative reading is what the opinions do not say; they include no discussion of whether the movants made evidentiary showings that demonstrated prima facie entitlement to judgment on the affirmative defenses. It is tempting to interpret this silence, as the dissent apparently does, to mean that the movant in each case had made such a showing and that the court in each case was simply applying Goff. The temptation is especially strong considering that New Mexico generally takes a cautious approach to summary judgment, see Romero, 2010-NMSC-035, ¶ 8; that reading the cases as we do effects a return to the approach in Kassel, which Goff expressly overruled, 1978-NMSC-074, ¶ 10; and that our Supreme Court cited Goff in both Mayfield Smithson Enterprises, 1995-NMSC-034, ¶ 9, and Biava, 1990-NMSC-023, ¶ 11.

[17] Although this alternative interpretation is possible, we think it is implausible because it cannot be squared with the explicit reasoning set forth in the opinions.

In Biava, although “only the legal effect of the facts [was] presented for determination,” Koenig, 1986-NMSC-066, ¶ 10; see Biava, 1990-NMSC-023, ¶ 4, our Supreme Court expressly agreed with the plaintiff-movant that it had “shifted the burden” to the nonmovant by “mov[ing] for summary judgment and adduc[ing] the nonmovant’s answer admitting liability” on the promissory note at issue. Biava, 1990-NMSC-023, ¶ 11. And in Mayfield Smithson Enterprises, our Supreme Court stated that the discussion in “the remainder of [its] opinion” supported the Court’s conclusion that the plaintiff had “made a prima facie showing of entitlement to summary judgment.” 1995-NMSC-034, ¶ 10. Yet, in detailing the evidence that supported the plaintiff’s case for summary judgment, the Court never mentioned, much less discussed, the defendant’s affirmative defense that the plaintiff-movant was equitably estopped from denying the existence of a lien. See id. ¶¶ 11-21. Finally, in Galef, this Court relied on Biava, but not Goff in holding that the defendant had not carried its burden of rebutting the plaintiff-movant’s prima facie showing of entitlement to summary judgment. Contrary to the dissent’s assertion, the analyses in these more recent precedents do not “illustrate Goffs’s application.” Dissent Op. ¶ 35. The dissent does not identify anything in the opinions that is consistent with its conclusory assertion.

[18] Based on our understanding of binding New Mexico precedent, we conclude that once the plaintiff-movant makes a prima facie case on its claim alone, the defendant bears the burden of demonstrating a genuine issue of material fact regarding any affirmative defense that it relies on to oppose the entry of summary judgment. Applying this rule to the case before us, we now ask, as to each affirmative defense, whether the district court erred by concluding that Defendants failed to carry their burden of showing a genuine issue of material fact. To overcome the presumption that the district court ruled correctly, Defendants “must affirmatively demonstrate” error. See Farmers, Inc. v. Dal Mach. & Fabricating, Inc., 1990-NMSC-100, ¶ 8, 111 N.M. 6, 800 P.2d 1063.

1 In his specially concurring opinion in Biava, Justice Ransom took the position, consistent with Goff—but without asserting that the majority’s approach was inconsistent with Goff—that until a plaintiff has made a prima facie showing that there is no genuine issue of material fact as to an affirmative defense, it is not incumbent on the defendant to establish the facts supporting the defense. Biava, 1990-NMSC-023, ¶¶ 20-21 (Ransom, J., specially concurring); see also Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Sydow, 1988-NMSC-029, ¶ 4, 107 N.M. 104, 753 P.2d 350 (holding that the plaintiff-movant had met its burden of rebutting the defendant’s affirmative defense of accord and satisfaction “by presenting an affidavit showing that the defendant had made no reimbursement” of amounts paid by the plaintiff for an injury caused by a third party); Azar v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 2003-NMCA-062, ¶ 88, 133 N.M. 669, 68 P.3d 909 (holding that the plaintiffs had not met their burden of “demonstrating that no genuine issue of material fact existed as to each element of their claims, and as to the [defendant’s] affirmative defenses” (emphasis added)).
1. Home Loan Protection Act

Defendants argue that summary judgment was improper because there was a genuine issue as to whether the actions of SunTrust violated the Home Loan Protection Act (HLPA), NMSA 1978, §§ 58-21A-1 to -14 (2003, as amended through 2009), and, in turn, the Unfair Practices Act. See generally § 58-21A-12 ("A violation of the [HLPA] constitutes an unfair or deceptive trade practice pursuant to the Unfair Practices Act."). In their answer, Defendants pled, as an affirmative defense, a violation of the HLPA under Section 58-21A-4. In its motion for summary judgment, Plaintiff pointed to Defendants' failure to plead facts in support of the defense. In the ensuing litigation, Plaintiff argued in the district court that Section 58-21A-11(B) is the only provision of the HLPA that provides a defense to foreclosure and that Defendants did not have a viable defense under that provision. Defendants responded by arguing that their HLPA defense was not based on Section 58-21A-11(B).

2. Unclean Hands

Defendants argue that summary judgment was improper because there was a genuine issue as to whether Plaintiff came to the foreclosure action with unclean hands. We disagree. In their answer, Defendants pled that "[t]he claims and causes of action contained in the [c]omplaint are barred by the doctrine of unclean hands." Plaintiff addressed the affirmative defense in its motion for summary judgment by highlighting that Defendants' answer pled "no specific facts in support of" the defense. Defendants eventually explained the factual basis for their unclean-hands defense in their sur-reply to Plaintiff's summary judgment motion; they contended that SunTrust was responsible for their default as evidenced by SunTrust's refusal to accommodate Defendants' inability to afford their monthly loan payment, which SunTrust had recently increased. Defendants relied on entries in SunTrust's "consolidated notes log" to suggest that SunTrust advised Defendants that their account was "current" and denied their requested loan modification on January 17, 2011, because Defendants did not have a "reason" for imminently defaulting even though their account was in default as of January 1, 2011. In its sur-reply, Plaintiff did not dispute any of the facts that Defendants raised in support of their defense of unclean hands. Instead, Plaintiff contended that, if they were true, Defendants' factual allegations would have enabled Defendants to avoid summary judgment.

3. Failure to Mitigate Damages

Defendants argue that summary judgment was improper because there were genuine issues as to whether SunTrust could have mitigated its damages by taking action to forestall Defendants' default and whether Plaintiff eschewed opportunities to reduce the damages after Defendants defaulted. Insofar as Defendants contend that the doctrine of mitigation of damages obligated SunTrust to take action that would have enabled Defendants to avoid default, they have not supported that argument with any pertinent authority, and we therefore decline to review the issue. See In re Adoption of Doe, 1984-NMSC-024, ¶ 2, 100 N.M. 764, 676 P.2d 1329.

To the extent Defendants' argument on appeal is that the district court erred by granting summary judgment to Plaintiff on Defendants' unclean-hands defense, because the facts supporting the defense were not disputed, only the legal effect of those facts was during the district court when it ruled on Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. And Defendants have given us no reason to conclude that (1) SunTrust dirtied its hands by refusing to modify Defendants' loan, cf. Magnolia Mountain Ltd. v. Ski Rio Partners, Ltd., 2006-NMCA-027, ¶ 14, 137 N.M. 288, 131 P.3d 675 (holding that the district court did not abuse its discretion by rejecting the defendant's unclean hands defense "[d]espite [the defendants'] protestations that [the plaintiff] led it astray"), and (2) unclean hands is a defense to foreclosure under these circumstances. Cf. id. (reasoning that it was "unlikely that the defense of unclean hands [was] applicable" to a foreclosure action in part because "there [had] been no allegation of impropriety in the execution of the note and mortgage"). Because Defendants have not cited any legal authority or developed any argument to support either conclusion, we decline to reach the issue. See Carr y v. Great Nw. Ins. Co., 2014-NMCA-031, ¶ 28, 320 P.3d 482 ("Where a party cites no authority to support an argument, we may assume no such authority exists."); Elane Photography, LLC v. Willock, 2013-NMSC-040, ¶ 70, 309 P.3d 53 (recognizing the "substantial risk of error" that exists when an appellate court "rule[s] on an inadequately briefed issue"). Accordingly, Defendants have not shown that the district court erred by rejecting the defense of unclean hands as a matter of law. See Farmers, Inc., 1990-NMSC-100, ¶ 8.

Because Defendants' affirmative defenses are, for the most part, based on SunTrust's conduct, cf. Bank of N.Y., 2014-NMSC-007, ¶ 39 (recognizing that the defendants had asserted an earlier lender's alleged misconduct as a defense to the plaintiff's attempt at foreclosure), we assume without deciding throughout the remainder of this opinion that SunTrust's conduct could preclude Plaintiff from foreclosing Defendants' mortgage.
Defendants did not “fairly invoke[]” a ruling, see Rule 12-321(A), on whether a genuine issue of material fact as to the amount of damages required the district court to hold a trial exclusively on that question. Because Defendants did not preserve the issue of whether a damages trial was necessary, we decline to review it. See Crutchfield, 2005-NMCA-022, ¶ 14.

[27] For these reasons, we reject Defendants’ argument that Plaintiff’s failure to mitigate damages precluded the entry of summary judgment for Plaintiff. See Farmers, Inc., 1990-NMSC-100, ¶ 8.

C. Defendants Failed to Preserve Their Argument That They Needed Additional Discovery to Respond to the Summary Judgment Motion

[28] Finally, Defendants argue that the district court erred by granting summary judgment when Defendants were awaiting discovery from Plaintiff. In their January 2017 response to Plaintiff’s motion for summary judgment, Defendants moved for a continuance to allow them to conduct discovery pursuant to Rule 1-056(F). Defendants estimated that they could complete the requested discovery within six months. As Plaintiff correctly points out, Defendants very soon thereafter received responses to their first set of interrogatories and requests for production. Indeed, Defendants attached parts of those discovery materials to their sur-reply to Plaintiff’s motion for summary judgment. At the hearing on the motion, which was held over a year after Defendants requested a six-month continuance, Defendants again relied on the same discovery materials, and they did not ask the district court to continue the hearing so that they could obtain more evidence through discovery. Because Defendants never alerted the district court that they needed any discovery in addition to the responses to interrogatories and requests for production that they had already received and used, Defendants failed to preserve their argument that the district court erred by not allowing additional discovery, and we decline to reach it.

See Rule 12-321(A); Nellis v. Farmers Ins. Co. of Ariz., 2012-NMCA-020, ¶ 23, 272 P.3d 143 (“The rules of preservation are no different for review of summary judgment than for review of other final orders.”).

[29] Defendants’ use of Rule 1-056(F) to marshal evidence to support their affirmative defenses illustrates a flaw in the dissent’s rationale. The dissent contends that an important function of the Goff rule is to prevent “banks and other large financial institutions [from] overpower[ing] homeowners, consumers, and tenants, obtaining a summary judgment before the facts in defense are known.” Dissent Op. ¶ 32. This conflates two distinct issues: (1) how burdens are allocated in summary judgment proceedings and (2) when nonmovants may use discovery to obtain evidence necessary to resist summary judgment. Goff pertains only to the first topic; it has nothing to do with the second, which is governed by Rule 1-056(F). With or without the Goff rule, Rule 1-056(F) and the rules of discovery afford all litigants—small and large alike, regardless of the nature of the claims and defenses—a right to use the tried-and-true tools of discovery to acquire evidence they need to oppose summary judgment. The existence of this right is the solution to the problem the dissent identifies. Cf. Fed. Nat’l Mortg. Ass’n v. Chiulli, 2018-NMCA-054, ¶¶ 1, 5, 20, 425 P.3d 739 (affirming the dismissal, as a discovery sanction, of a foreclosure action in which SunTrust, before the plaintiff took its place as the plaintiff, failed to provide discovery relevant to the defendant’s defenses). When the plaintiff-movant possesses evidence that the nonmovant needs to support its affirmative defenses, the nonmovant may simply request that evidence in discovery and, if necessary, seek a Rule 1-056(F) continuance, just as Defendants did in this case. See also Rule 1-037(B) NMRA (describing the relief that is available when an opposing party fails to provide discovery).

CONCLUSION

[31] IT IS SO ORDERED.

YOHALEM, Judge (dissenting).

[32] I respectfully dissent from the majority’s holding that New Mexico law no longer requires a plaintiff who seeks summary judgment on its complaint to demonstrate that no genuine issue of material fact exists as to the defendant’s affirmative defenses. The majority concludes that our Supreme Court’s decision in Goff, is no longer good law, having been implicitly overruled by subsequent Supreme Court decisions. I cannot agree with the majority’s conclusion that our Supreme Court’s decision in Smithson Enterprises, 1990-NMSC-023, and Mayfield Smithson Enterprises, 1995-NMSC-034, overrule Goff. Nor am I persuaded on the merits that the ruling in Goff should be overruled. In my view, our Supreme Court’s decision in Goff, requiring that a plaintiff seeking summary judgment present “some material” 1978-NMSC-074, ¶ 9, rebutting the defendant’s affirmative defenses in order to support its motion is required by Rule 1-056(E), remains important to ensure that banks and other large financial institutions do not overpower homeowners, consumers, and tenants, by obtaining a summary judgment before the facts in defense are known. For these reasons, as further explained below, I cannot join the majority opinion.

[33] In Goff, our Supreme Court overruled this Court’s decision in Kassel, 1973-NMCA-028, see Goff, 1978-NMSC-074, ¶ 10, which held, as the majority does again here today, that a plaintiff need only establish a prima facie case of entitlement to summary judgment on its own claim and need not address the affirmative defenses. Id.
The two Supreme Court opinions relied on by the majority to support its view that the Court has subsequently rejected the Goff rule on affirmative defenses each cite to Goff and each explicitly rely on Goff's holding that, only when a plaintiff has presented some factual material negating the affirmative defenses, does the burden shift to the defendant, the proponent of the affirmative defenses, to show that a genuine issue of fact requires trial. Id. ¶¶ 9, 12; see Biava, 1990-NMSC-023, ¶ 11; Mayfield Smithson Enterprises, 1995-NMSC-034, ¶ 9. Rather than overruling Goff, Biava, and Mayfield Smithson Enterprises, our Supreme Court's subsequent cases illustrate Goff's application. In each case, the initial burden to present a prima facie case on the affirmative defenses has been met by the plaintiff, shifting the burden to the defendant to show that a genuine issue of fact regarding one or more of those defenses requires trial. Although the focus of these cases is primarily on whether the defendant has responded by introducing sufficient evidence to rebut the plaintiff's prima facie case, I do not agree with the majority that this indicates an implicit rejection of Goff. Our Supreme Court has continued after its decisions in Biava and Mayfield Smithson Enterprises to disfavor summary judgment and to impose on the movant the burden of submitting sufficient evidence to make a prima facie case as to each element necessary to support summary judgment. Romero, 2010-NMSC-035, ¶¶ 8, 10.

I cannot agree that the subsequent cases relied on by the majority abrogate the Goff rule.
OPINION

HENDERSON, Judge.

[1] Eli Sanchez (Sanchez), Patricia C. Trujillo (Trujillo), Arroyo Hondo Community Association, and Acequia Madre del Llano (collectively, Petitioners') petitioned for a writ of certiorari to review the district court's decision affirming permits granted by the Board of County Commissioners of Taos County (the County). The County affirmed the decision of the Taos Planning Commission (Planning Commission) to grant a permit to construct a heliport on property owned by Intervenor Edmund Healy (Healy), adjoining agricultural fields farmed by Sanchez and Trujillo. Petitioners claim that a series of unpermitted and permitted construction ranging over a five-year period and culminating in the permit allowing construction of the heliport interfered with their access to and use of a lateral that runs across the Healy property to their fields. [2] The County refused to apply the provisions of the Taos, N.M., Ordinance 2015-02, Land Use Regulations (LUR) (2015), requiring the permission of the acequia commission for any construction activity which disturbs an acequia "in any way[,]" claiming that this regulation applies only to construction that disturbs an acequia madre, and not a lateral. See Taos, N.M., LUR art 4, § 4.8.1(N). [3] In addition, the County refused to consider Petitioners' challenge to the installation of a culvert in 2012 and the building of a retaining wall in 2015, preliminary steps in the heliport construction that disturbed the lateral. Petitioners argued that their appeal is timely based on the unusual circumstances of piecemeal construction and the County's failure to provide notice and request approval of the acequia commission. The County found, and the district court agreed, that the appeal of any permit prior to the final permit for the heliport was untimely. [4] In this appeal, we address (1) whether a lateral is also considered an acequia under the Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, § 4.5.3(C); and (2) whether there were unusual circumstances which excused the untimely appeal by Petitioners. Having read the briefs, heard oral argument, and being fully informed on the issues and applicable law as raised by the parties, we reverse the district court and hold that laterals are acequias; and remand a portion of this case to the County to hold a new hearing regarding all the permits issued during the course of this construction, consistent with this opinion.

BACKGROUND

[5] We first lay out the geographical description at the center of this litigation and set forth the general factual and procedural background preceding this appeal, reserving further discussion of facts or litigative events where pertinent to our analysis. [6] This case involves three named acequias and a lateral in the small northern New Mexico town of Hondo Seco.

The Acequia Madre del Llano was not a named petitioner in this case until the Notice of Appeal was filed before the district court on August 9, 2017.

We use the term “lateral” to refer to smaller ditches that serve one or more owners. These smaller ditches are commonly located between property owners. The term “lateral” is used interchangeably with the terms “acequia, lindero” and “acequia, venita” as defined in the LUR. See Taos, N.M., LUR art. 2, § 2.1.2 (Definitions).

The acequias and laterals include (1) the Acequia Madre del Llano (Acequia Madre); (2) the Acequia de la Cordillera; (3) the Acequia de la Plaza; and (4) a lateral—which is at the center of this appeal. The tracts of property involved are that of Healy, and three adjacent properties of parcientes. Sanchez, Padilla, and Trujillo (Padilla is not a party to this case), to the west of Healy’s tract. The unnamed lateral runs between the boundary of the Healy tract and the three parcientes’ tracts, delivering water to the fields of the three parcientes. The Acequia Madre is not located on the property of the parties, but it is the main acequia, or irrigation ditch, which feeds water into the other acequias and laterals, including the lateral at issue in this case.

As noted above, this case involves a series of permitted and unpermitted construction projects that took place from approximately 2011 through 2016, which Petitioners allege disturbed the lateral acequia that carries water to the Sanchez and Trujillo fields. Healy, as a developer, sought a series of permits from the Taos County Planning Director (Planning Director) to construct a bridge, a retaining wall, a parking lot, and ultimately a heliport, on his property. His construction began in 2011 or early 2012 with construction to encase the impacted lateral in a culvert. This construction was done without a permit. The facts below are organized in chronological order, beginning with the construction of the culvert, followed by each of Healy’s applications for a permit. The procedural history follows.

I. Factual Background

A. The Unpermitted Construction

Placing the Lateral Into Culverts

Petitioners assert that around 2012, without applying for, or receiving a county permit, Healy proceeded to construct a culvert encasing the lateral across his property. This lateral was one that was shared by the parcientes. In contrast, the County maintains that the culverts had already been installed in 2011, prior to any of these proceedings or applications for permits. Healy admits that at some point in 2012, he placed the laterals in steel culverts and built a junction box and installed gates so that all three parcientes could distribute water among their properties.

Healy notes that he received permission to place the lateral into culverts from the brother of one of the Petitioners.

B. The 2012 Permit

In 2012, Healy submitted an application to the Taos County Planning Department (Planning Department) seeking a Special Use Permit (SUP-002-2012 permit), to construct a driveway and bridge crossing to his property. Though the permit application was for a driveway and bridge, a terraced retaining wall was also shown in the plans. Petitioners contend that, despite the retaining wall being shown in the plans, it was not officially a part of the proposal. The plans did not show acequias or laterals that flowed across the property. Petitioners assert that while they received notice for the SUP-002-2012 permit, the notice focused exclusively on the construction of the road and bridge. Petitioners state that the notice did not fairly apprise them that Healy also sought to build a retaining wall that would interfere with their lateral. The Planning Commission approved the permit application.

C. The 2015 Permit

In 2015, Healy submitted an application for a building permit (CO-203-15), to construct a retaining wall. According to the Planning Director, this application—or the “building permit”—was not required to undergo the same process of review as a special use permit or administrative permit. The Planning Director maintained that the construction of the retaining wall was exempt from such review under Taos, N.M., LUR art. 3, § 3.3.1 (Exemptions from Land Use Permit Requirements).

A memorandum from the Planning Director to the Planning Commission acknowledged that the layout of the proposed retaining wall differed from the retaining wall included in the SUP-002-2012 permit plans. The location of the proposed retaining wall was changed to cross over the lateral, making access to the lateral difficult or impossible and blocking the traditional access to the headgate used by parcientes. The memorandum emphasized that the Planning Director reviewed the change and “determined that the reconfiguration did not create a health, safety, or welfare issue.” No mention is made of the effect of the construction on the lateral. No request for approval was made to the acequia commission. The Planning Director recommended that the Planning Commission grant the building permit (CO-203-15) to Healy to construct the retaining wall. The building permit was approved by the Planning Commission. The Planning Director also clarified in his memorandum that he “did not release the building permit for the retaining walls because they were referenced in the [SUP-002-2012 permit],” but because he interpreted the retaining walls as the type of limited excavation that needed only a building permit and did not need additional zoning. While there is an 8.5 x 11 inch paper notice that states it should be posted “in a conspicuous place,” there is nothing in the record indicating that the notice was actually posted.

D. The 2016 Permit

Finally, in 2016 Healy submitted a third application for an Administrative Permit (Admin.-003-2016 permit), to construct a helipad, parking lot, and driveway entrance. The application included, among other documents necessary for approval of an Administrative Permit, pursuant to Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, § 4.5.2 (Administrative or Special Use Application Submittal Requirements), an Environmental Impact Study, a determination letter from the Federal Aviation Administration, deeds, and notifications of approvals. The Planning Director deemed the application incomplete and requested further clarification on a number of items, including, for the first time, clarification of the project’s impact on the on-site acequias. In relevant part, the letter to Healy stated, “[T]he applicant failed to identify the location of the on-site acequia.”

3 Acequia, Parciente (also spelled Parciante) refers to “[a] member or shareholder of an [a]cequia, responsible for a share of ditch maintenance proportionate to his or her irrigated acreage.” Id. Sanchez, Padilla, and Trujillo are in fact parcientes of the Acequia Madre.

4 A culvert is defined as, “a transverse drain or waterway (as under a road, railroad, or canal).” Tompkins v. Carlsbad Irrigation Dist., 1981-NMCA-072, 59, 96 N.M. 368, 630 P.2d 767 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

5 A Special Use Permit is distinct from other types of permits issued by the Planning Department. The other includes, as relevant here, an Administrative Permit. Each type has its own permit requirements. See Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, § 4.1.1 (Permit Requirements). Both types of permits require the same type of notification and approvals, namely from “other entities such as pueblos, . . . neighborhood associations and acequia associations, as applicable.” Id. § 4.5.2(E).

6 Petitioners state that “[a] copy of the notice for the [SUP-002-2012] permit is not in the record due to the County’s refusal to allow ‘any testimony or exhibits pertaining to permits or construction phases prior to [the 2016 Permit],’ particularly the retaining walls.”
Healy was further directed to comply with Taos N.M. LUR art. 4, § 4.8.1(N), and identify the location of any acequias, and submit the application to the applicable acequia commission for review. [14] Healy responded to the Director's request for clarification, and in relevant part, pointed to a letter from the Acequia de La Plaza Commission, which stated (incorrectly) that the Acequia de La Plaza was the only on-site acequia on Healy's property. The letter from the Acequia de La Plaza Commission expressed support for the helipad and encouraged the approval of the administrative permit for the helipad. Healy further responded that "although there is an acequia or irrigation ditch across the street from [Healy]'s property and south of (behind) the Hondo Seco Volunteer Fire Department property, the ditch is located more than [sixty] feet beyond [Healy]'s property line." "The headgate for the lateral irrigation ditch serving [Healy]'s property is also located more than [sixty] feet beyond [Healy]'s property line and outside the survey limits. The irrigation gates and irrigation ditches located on [Healy]'s parcel are not maintained by the acequia."[8]

[15] On December 15, 2016, the Planning Director approved Healy's application for the administrative permit—Admin.-003-2016—subject to multiple conditions. Specifically, Condition No. 20 instructed that Healy "shall provide the Planning Department with a letter advising that the lateral irrigation ditches located within the site are not maintained by the acequia and that the helipad and parking area would not interrupt, reduce, or change the flow of water to the parciales of the lateral irrigation ditches." Pursuant to Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, § 4.5.3(C) public notice of the decision was posted, and any party aggrieved by the decision had up to thirty days to appeal to the Planning Commission. Taos, N.M., LUR art. 10, § 10.1.1(B) (Appeals).

II. Procedural Background
A. Appeal to the Taos Planning Commission
[16] Just over a month later—on January 17, 2017, Petitioners timely appealed the Admin.-003-2016 permit to the Planning Commission. In relevant part, Petitioners raised concerns with Condition No. 20. They claimed that the retaining wall that was built across the lateral interfered with their traditional and legal access to and from the lateral's headgate. Petitioners asserted that Healy's retaining wall was not given a set-back from the Sanchez family property line. Petitioners further complained that, although Healy was directed to provide a letter from the acequia commission prior to the helipad becoming operational, this issue should have been addressed during the design process and before breaking ground. In a response to the appeal, Healy asserted that the lateral irrigation ditch located on the site was not maintained by the Acequia Madre, and "that the helipad and parking area would not interrupt, reduce, or change the flow of water to the parciales of the lateral irrigation ditch." [17] The Planning Commission affirmed the Planning Director's approval for Healy's administrative permit after holding two separate hearings. Healy's permit was affirmed with conditions. The Commission included conditions similar to those set forth by the Planning Department, again including language identical to Condition No. 20. The condition again required Healy to "provide the . . . Planning Department with a letter advising that the lateral irrigation ditches located within the site were not maintained by [an] acequia [commission] and that the helipad and parking area would not interrupt, reduce, or change the flow of water to the parciales of the lateral irrigation ditches." The only letter in the record was the one previously provided by the Acequia de La Plaza Commission.

The Acequia de la Plaza's letter supports granting the administrative permit for the helipad, parking lot, and driveway entrance. However, the Acequia de La Plaza is not the acequia or lateral that is impacted by the retaining wall. Petitioners again timely appealed the Planning Commission's decision to the County on May 30, 2017.

B. Appeal to the County
[18] Upon its review the County commenced a public hearing and performed an on-site inspection. The County made findings to include in relevant part: [Healy] has introduced sufficient evidence that the Acequia Madre . . . which is located off-site will not be disturbed in any way by construction activity and that the development of the subject property is in excess of [twenty] feet of the bank of the Acequia Madre[.] The [County] also finds that the lateral ditches from the head gate located on the subject property were encased in culverts prior to the construction of the proposed helipad and not as a result of Administrative Permit Admin.-003-2016. Further, [par]ticipants from the lateral ditch may enter the property and control their respective irrigation flow at the head gate that maintenance of the lateral ditches will be maintained by [Healy].

The County, after considering all the evidence, and the arguments by the parties, affirmed the decision of the Planning Commission subject to multiple conditions. [10] Again in relevant part, the County directed Healy to provide the Planning Commission with a letter advising "that the lateral irrigation ditches located within the site were not maintained by the Acequia [Commission][11] and that the helipad and parking area would not interrupt, reduce, or change the flow of water to the parciales of the lateral irrigation ditches."
Petitioners then appealed the decision of the County to the district court.

C. The District Court Decision
[19] The district court, in its decision and order stated “[t]he sole issue [was] whether [Healy] was required to obtain the approval of the Acequia Madre . . . prior to the application being approved.” The district court concluded that the decision of the County was “based upon substantial evidence in the record, was not fraudulent, arbitrary or capricious[,] and was in accordance with the law.” The district court gave deference to the County’s interpretation of the LUR and held that laterals were not intended to be considered acequias. Finally, the district court held that the County properly denied consideration of the permits prior to the 2016 permit.

DISCUSSION
[20] A petition for writ of certiorari was timely filed with this Court, and we granted the writ. Petitioners raise two issues on appeal: (1) whether a lateral is considered an acequia under the Taos County LUR; and (2) whether the County properly treated Petitioners’ appeal of the permit allowing construction of the retaining wall as untimely without considering Petitioners’ evidence of piecemeal construction and lack of notice, circumstances that Petitioners claim excused a late appeal.

[21] On certiorari in an administrative appeal of this type, we employ “the same standard of review used by the district court while also determining whether the district court erred in its review.” Paule v. Santa Fe Cnty. Bd. of Cnty. Comm’rs, 2005-NMSC-021, ¶ 26, 138 N.M. 82, 117 P.3d 240. Our review is limited to ascertaining “whether the administrative agency acted fraudulently, arbitrarily or capriciously; whether the agency’s decision is supported by substantial evidence; or whether the agency acted in accordance with the law.” Id.; see Rule 1-075(R) NMRA (outlining the standards of review applicable to agency action); Rule 1-074(R) NMRA (same). “A ruling by an administrative agency is arbitrary and capricious if it is unreasonable or without a rational basis, when viewed in light of the whole record.” Rio Grande Chapter of Sierra Club, 2003-NMSC-005, ¶ 17, 133 N.M. 97, 61 P.3d 806. When applying this administrative standard of review, we will not substitute our judgment for that of the fact-finder, but we will review questions of law de novo. Id.

I. The District Court Incorrectly Determined That Laterals Are Not Intended to Be Considered Acequias
[22] In construing the LUR, the County encourages us to defer to its interpretation of the regulations, because as the zoning authority, it interpreted its own zoning ordinance. “When an agency construes a statute that governs it, the [C]ourt will accord some deference to the agency’s interpretation.” Marbob Energy Corp. v. N.M. Oil Conservation Comm’n, 2009-NMSC-013, ¶ 6, 146 N.M. 24, 206 P.3d 135. “The [C]ourt will confer a heightened degree of deference to legal questions that implicate special agency expertise[.]” Morningstar Water Users Ass’n v. N.M. Pub. Util. Comm’n, 1995-NMSC-062, ¶ 11, 120 N.M. 579, 904 P.2d 28 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

“However, the [C]ourt is not bound by the agency’s interpretation and may substitute its own independent judgment for that of the agency because it is the function of the courts to interpret the law.” Id. “The [C]ourt should reverse if the agency’s interpretation of a law is unreasonable or unlawful.” Id.

[23] In this case, we are required to interpret the LUR and determine and give effect to legislative intent. “Statutory interpretation is an issue of law, which we review de novo.” N.M. Indus. Energy Consumers v. N.M. Pub. Regul. Comm’n, 2007-NMSC-053, ¶ 19, 142 N.M. 533, 168 P.3d 105. It does not appear from the record that the County has any particular expertise or experience in determining what should be considered an acequia under the LUR. “Because statutory construction itself is not a matter within the purview of the Commission’s expertise, we afford little, if any, deference to the Commission on this matter.” Id. (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

[24] “In construing municipal ordinances or county zoning ordinances, such as the one here before us, the same rules of construction are used as when construing statutes of the legislature.” Burroughs v. Bd. of Cnty. Comm’rs of Bernalillo Cnty., 1975-NMSC-051, ¶ 13, 88 N.M. 303, 540 P.2d 233. “When construing statutes, our guiding principle is to determine and give effect to legislative intent.” N.M. Indus. Energy Consumers, 2007-NMSC-053, ¶ 20. Guided by classic canons of statutory construction, “[w]e look first to the plain language of the statute, giving the words their ordinary meaning, unless the Legislature indicates a different one was intended.” Id. “In addition, we strive to read related statutes in harmony so as to give effect to all provisions[.]” Id. We read provisions of a statute “together with other statutes in pari materia under the presumption that the [L]egislature acted with full knowledge of relevant statutory and common law[,]” Id. (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

We must determine whether laterals—such as the one that runs between the parties’ properties—are subject to the same type of protection from disturbances as are acequias under the LUR. We first look to the language in the LUR. The LUR requires “express permission” from the entity legally responsible for the operation and maintenance of the acequia—the acequia commission—prior to disturbing an acequia. Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, § 4.8.1 (N). The language at issue further provides: No acequia, whether onsite or off-site, shall be disturbed in any way by building development or construction activity unless approved or deemed approved by the acequia commission. Id. (emphasis added).

[26] The plain language of Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, § 4.8.1(N) does not clearly identify whether an “acequia” is an “acequia, madre,” an “acequia, venita,” or perhaps an “acequia, lindero.” Thus, it requires the Court to consider whether an acequia, and the acequia subcategories—acequia, madre; acequia, venita, and; acequia, lindero—are all acequias for purposes of Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, § 4.8.1(N). If a lateral is considered an acequia, according to the LUR, any disturbance must be approved by the applicable acequia commission. We look to the definitions as provided by the LUR:

Acequia - Referring to both the irrigation ditch and the organization of parciences who use the ditch. The acequia transports surface water from its source, e.g. a stream, a spring, watershed, a river, or a reservoir, to irrigate lands used primarily for agricultural purposes. Also, an acequia is a form of public corporation that is a political subdivision of the State of New Mexico. Like all other political subdivisions, acequias are competent to exercise those powers that the [L]egislature has delegated to them, expressly or by necessary implication.

Acequia, Lindero - In most cases, linderos are smaller ditches that serve one or more owners. The ditches are commonly located between property owners. Some [a]cequia organizations use this term in the same context as venitas.

Acequia, Madre - The mother ditch or main irrigation canal diverting water from stream.

12 For purposes of this opinion, we use the word “lateral” to collectively refer to “acequia, linderos” and “acequia, venitas” as found under the Taos, N.M., LUR art. 2, § 2.1.2.
... Acequia, Venita - Commonly refers to laterals originating from the Acequia Madre or [a]cequias that deliver water to individual lands. Some venitas have their own commission and collect additional dues to those of the main ditch. Taos, N.M., LUR art. 2, § 2.1.2 (emphasis added).

[27] Petitioners and Amicus point to these definitions and state that madres, linderos, laterals, contras and venitas are all subcategories or subparts of an acequia included within the overarching term “acequia.” The County and Healy contend, on the other hand, that the LUR establishes clear and deliberate distinctions between acequias and laterals, which demonstrate that they are not intended to be considered identical.

[28] We do not find the rules of statutory construction relied on by the County particularly helpful. The County and Healy suggest that if this Court were to conclude that a lateral is indeed an acequia under the LUR, it would be adding language to the term “acequia.” See High Ridge Hinkle Joint Venture v. City of Albuquerque, 1998-NMSC-050, ¶ 5, 126 N.M. 413, 970 P.2d 599 (“The [C]ourt will not read into a statute or ordinance language which is not there, particularly if it makes sense as written.” (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)); Marbob Energy Corp., 2009-NMSC-013, ¶ 20 (additional language will not be read into the statute language especially if the provision makes sense as written.). The County specifically argues that Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, § 4.8.1(N) only refers to the acequia madre, effectively excluding linderos, venitas, or laterals. If this Court were to construe Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, Section 4.8.1(N) as applying only to the acequia madre, we would be required to read the word “madre” into the language. If we interpreted the language according to the County’s suggestion, Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, § 4.8.1(N) would read as follows:

> No acequia [madre], whether on-site or off-site, shall be disturbed in any way by building development or construction activity unless approved or deemed approved by the acequia commission.

(Emphasis added.) Because the drafters of the LUR can include additional language if they so desire, we will not do this work on their behalf. Cf. State v. Greenwood, 2012-NMCA-017, ¶ 38, 271 P.3d 753 (“The Legislature knows how to include language in a statute if it so desires.” (alteration, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted)).

[29] The County and Healy also refer us to language found elsewhere in the LUR, which states that “[a]ll watercourses on the property, including springs, acequia systems and related water improvements, which are located within 150 feet of the property, must be shown[,]” and that “acequia systems” shall not be used as drainage ways. Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, § 4.6.5(B)(18)(a), (b) (emphasis added). The County asks this Court to infer that because the term “acequia systems” exists in one section of the LUR, it is clear that the term “acequia,” when used alone, refers only to an acequia madre. Petitioners argue that the term “acequia systems,” should not be considered as part of the interpretation under LUR, noting it doesn’t appear anywhere else in LUR, but only in a single section, appearing to be “entirely anomalous.” We agree with Petitioners that there is no clear indication of intent to apply the term “acequia systems” broadly throughout the LUR, particularly given its absence from the definition of “acequia.”

[30] Not finding clear intent based on the canons of statutory construction relied on by the parties, we turn to the broader context in which the LURs were adopted and operate. The New Mexico Legislature has delegated to counties the statutory authority to create local zoning ordinances and planning commissions. See NMSA 1978, § 3-21-1 (2007, amended 2019) (“Zoning; authority of county of municipality”); NMSA 1978, § 4-57-1 (1967) (providing that counties may create planning commissions). Pursuant to this state statutory authority, the County’s LURs provide that the regulations must comply with state law and that the regulations “are meant to augment and enhance federal and state law and other county regulations.” Taos, N.M., LUR art. 1, § 1.2.4; see id. § 1.2.1 (providing that “[t]he Taos County [LUR’s] comply with [NMSA]”). The regulations further provide that “[a]ll development under these regulations shall comply with all county ordinances, the Taos County Comprehensive Plan, and applicable state and federal laws.” Id. § 1.2.5.

[31] The New Mexico statutes that govern acequias throughout the state are found in NMSA 1978, Sections 73-2-1 to -68 (1851, as amended through 2019). We pay particular attention to Section 73-2-11, which states in relevant part, “every one said community ditches beginning at the dam or entrance of the water, in continued course to the end of the same, shall be considered as one ditch or acequia only.” (Emphasis added.) We reject the County’s argument that the exception in this statute somehow negates the lateral’s status as an acequia. In our view, the plain language of the state statute, properly construed, means that all smaller ditches, or laterals, that run along the course anywhere from where the water begins, to the end, where the water is carried to a parciant’s property to irrigate a field, shall be considered a single acequia. See Buynak, Brigette; Jerold Widdison; and Darcy S. Bushnell. “Acequias.” Water Matters! 2015, 1 (2015): 4-1-4-12. https://digitalrepository.unm.edu/utton_watermatters/vol2015/iss1/9 (explaining historical context of acequias and stating, “[t]he acequias include the diversion dams, headgates, flumes, and other features needed to transport water for irrigating fields, gardens, croplands, and pastures”). This language is reflective and supportive of what is stated in the LUR, as stated above, namely that “[t]he acequia transports surface water from its source, e.g. a stream, a spring, a watershed, a river, or a reservoir, to irrigate lands used primarily for agricultural purposes.” Taos, N.M., LUR art. 2, § 2.1.2. (defining acequia). Both provisions state that an acequia begins at the source. The state statute indicates that an acequia continues through to the end of the course, while the LUR states an acequia transports water from the source to irrigate lands. Transporting water, to the end of the course of a ditch, is what New Mexico’s system of acequias was intended to do.

[32] We also look to early case law from our Supreme Court for more context on the role of acequias:

> New Mexico being in the arid region, the early settlements were established along the banks of perennial rivers, or in the mountain valleys where water from springs and creeks was reasonably certain to be available for irrigation at the needed times. . . . [T]he people built their houses and established their towns and plazas close together, and cultivated the lands in small tracts adjacent to the settlement. . . . [T]he people by their joint effort would construct an irrigation ditch, sufficiently large enough to convey water to their lands for the irrigation of crops. Each individual owned and cultivated a specific tract of land, sufficient to provide food for the needs of his family, and from the main ditch laterals were run to the various tracts of land to be watered.

Parkview Cnty. Ditch Ass’n v. Peper, 2014-NMCA-049, ¶ 3, 323 P.3d 939 (quoting Snow v. Abalos, 1914-NMSC-022, ¶ 8, 18 N.M. 681, 140 P. 1044). Parkview and Snow make it clear that acequias are intended for the purpose of irrigating fields and crops. This purpose informs our analysis.
The County, on the other hand, urges this Court to limit its focus to the 2016 permit, claiming it is the only permit properly before us for review. The County asks us not to review Petitioners’ grievances regarding the prior permitted and unpermitted construction, which allowed the lateral to be culverted and the retaining wall to be constructed. The County claims the culverts were installed prior to the 2012 permit, and Petitioners did not challenge or object to the acequias being culverted until four years later. The County and Healy further assert that there was permission from a Petitioner’s brother to put the lateral in a culvert and then bury it in 2011, before the 2012 permit was issued. Petitioners respond, arguing that Sanchez’s brother was misled, and even if he was not, his brother is a minority owner and therefore did not have authority to grant permission.13 Petitioners further state that the acequia commission is the proper party who should have been contacted, and whose permission was required by the LUR, not that of the individual parciences. We construe the second issue to be whether Petitioners’ lack of notice, combined with the piecemeal nature of the construction, together constitute unusual circumstances justifying the late filing of an appeal.

We begin by reiterating that in our foregoing discussion, we conclude that laterals are acequias. We therefore agree with Petitioners that notification and permission from the proper acequia commission was required. As we have stated, obstructing acequias—or laterals—is prohibited by the LUR. See Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, § 4.8.1(N) (“No acequia, whether on-site or off-site, shall be disturbed in any way by building development or construction activity unless approved or deemed approved by the acequia commission.”); see also id. § 4.8.1(N) (1), (2). Healy initially failed to provide notice and seek approval from the Acequia Madre Commission when it placed the lateral in culverts. The Planning Director and the County also failed to ensure there was notice and approval from the acequia commission prior to approving multiple, piecemeal permits that allowed Healy to build over the culverted lateral and restricted the parciences access to the headgate. We hold that these actions were in violation of Taos, N.M., LUR art. 4, §4.8.1(N).

Next, we address the notice to the remainder of the Petitioners. The County points to Rule 1-074(E) and NMSA 1978, Section 39-3-1.1(C) (1999), which specify that a person may appeal an agency decision within thirty days of the decision.

13 The Court notes that Healy does not claim to have received permission from any of the other parciences affected by the lateral being placed in a culvert.
Because of these errors by the Planning Director and the County in failing to notify Petitioners and permit the construction appropriately, the scope and interference by the retaining wall was not apparent to Petitioners until the work was substantially complete. We conclude that the piecemeal and misleading permitting process created an unusual or exceptional circumstance which extends the time to appeal. Petitioners did not have proper notice of the construction, and this excuses Petitioners' delay in filing an appeal.

Therefore, we hold that that Petitioners' untimely appeal regarding the construction of the retaining wall should be excused. We remand this case to the Taos County Board of Commissioners to hold a new hearing regarding all the permits issued consistent with this opinion.

CONCLUSION

We reverse and remand for proceedings consistent with this opinion.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
