Develop the Habit of Active Listening

“Active listening” is the practice of engaging with a speaker using techniques of listening that maximize understanding. The goal is more complete communication. Active listening is conscious and purposeful. The skill is often taught in couples counseling because it reduces misunderstandings, conflicts, and frustration; increases closeness; and helps people solve problems faster. Obviously, active listening has immense value in the workplace. Do you know how to actively listen? To practice active listening, decide to be neutral and nonjudgmental when the speaker begins. Don’t interrupt. Periodically reflect back your understanding. Don’t “fill the silence” when the speaker pauses. Use nonverbal behaviors to show you’re listening and engaged. Finally, ask for clarification if needed, and summarize what you heard.

Can Exercise Prevent the Worst of COVID-19 Illness?

Here’s another reason to exercise—surviving COVID-19 or a similar illness in the future. A study of nearly 50,000 people hospitalized for COVID-19 examined those who were consistently physically active, especially with regard to the officially recommended 150 minutes per week. Patients who were not consistently active had a greater risk of hospitalization and death. Regular physical activity reduces the risk of systemic inflammation. It’s this inflammation that makes the lungs more vulnerable to damage caused by COVID-19. Exercise also improves heart health, lung capacity, and chest wall strength! Result: Reduced risk for the worst outcome.

Equity in the Workplace: What’s Your Role?

Workplace equity means having a workplace where everyone feels valued, is treated fairly, and is empowered to contribute and to pursue happiness in their job. Workplace equity is a goal that requires everyone’s participation so opportunity for all becomes reality. What’s your role? Here are five ways that you, as a coworker, can help bring equity to your workplace. 1) Value diversity. Diverse workplaces enhance businesses and help them compete in an increasingly diverse world-of-work that expects and rewards workplace equity. See diversity as a plus for any organization. 2) Value inclusion. Inclusion means that differences among employees aren’t cause for discrimination—people feel equally welcomed and valued for their contributions. 3) “Step in.” When you witness values of inclusiveness, equality, respect, or equal opportunity being overlooked or dismissed, be the one who says, “Can we talk about ___ in this situation?” 4) Don’t turn away or dismiss slights or unintentional (indirect) discrimination against others. Those who are victims of discrimination often brush off or set aside these micro-aggressions. 5) Know your biases and mind your language. Everyone has biases, but consider how these biases are demonstrated in private conversations with close friends, and how they may emerge within the workplace and community at large. Workplace equity is an evolving value and area of study for employers and work organizations. The misconception among many employees is that the responsibility for equity lies solely with management and the organization’s policies. Ultimately, however, it is the employee-to-employee interaction level that determines whether the goal is realized. This is the business case for understanding and promoting workplace equity. Morning Grogginess? Try Avoiding the Snooze Button

It may sound like too much to bear, but giving up the snooze button as you struggle to get out of bed might help eliminate the morning grogginess and excessive daytime sleepiness you experience. Snooze buttons can create a condition called “fragmented sleep,” as they interrupt REM sleep, which is the restorative part of your sleep cycle. Research shows fragmented sleep can produce grogginess that might linger for hours. Also, consider visiting your doctor to rule out a sleep disorder.
